She Who Jumped from the Ferryboat Left This and Nothing More.

NO TRACE OF HER BODY.

Dresden China Handle May Serve to Establish Her Identity.

WORE FASHIONABLE CLOTHES.

But Two Men Saw Her Leap; It Was at Midnight, and the Rain Kept Other Passengers in the Cabin.

The Parasol, with Detail of Its Handle.

This is the sole clue to her identity left by the woman who jumped from the Williamsburg ferryboat at midnight on Thursday and was drowned.

A PARASOL with a porcelain handle, on which are painted two figures dressed in the style of the period of Louis XV., is the only clue to the identity of the woman who threw herself into the river, just before midnight on Thursday, from the ferryboat on its way from East Twenty-third street to Williamsburg.

NEGROES FLEEING FROM WILMINGTON.

Driven Out by Organized Bands of "Red Shirts."

Obnoxious White Men Also Ordered to Get Out of Town.

NO LYNCHING ALLOWED.

Mayor Waddell and His Police Prevent Further Killing.

RULE OF WHITES NOW PREVAIL.

Three Hundred Policemen Sworn In to Preserve Order—No Collision Expected Between the Races.

NO TRADE AT WILMINGTON. (Associated Press Market Report.)

Wilmington, Nov. 11.—With the killing of the negroes yesterday the backbone of the trouble seems to have been broken. The authors of the tragedy have gone to their homes and the mob has disbanded as if in contempt of the gangs of negroes who still hang about in the black quarters growling and threatening the whites.

Law and order are gradually being restored, and those among the negroes who feel resentment against the whites are afraid to show their true colors. Early this morning 300 resolute white men gathered at the Mayor's office and were sworn in as new policemen.

Late last night half a hundred white citizens got together and planned a big lynching party which was to raid the city from centre to circumference to-day.

There were six negroes in jail who had been arrested during the excitement of the day, and who some people of the town thought should be summarily dispatched. One was a leader, Thomas Bryant, who was charged with declaring that he would wash his hands in a white man's blood before night. Another was A. R. Bryant, charged with being a dangerous character; the others were less prominent, but had been under the ban of the whites for conduct calculated to incite trouble.

Mayor Waddell and his associates put a veto upon the proposed lynching. They only that good government was prevailing in Wilmington from this time, and would commence immediately. The would-be lynchers were so insistent that the Mayor called out a guard to keep the jail safe.

G. Z. French, one of the county leaders, attempted to escape. He ran through the streets, but was overtaken at the depot by several members of the posse.

A posse was thrown over his head and he was taken to the house of a negro lawyer named Henderson. The hard-knuckled leader, who was inciting their race to violence.

White Men Must Go, Too. The retiring chief of police, Magistrate R. H. Bunting, Charles H. Gilbert, Charles McAllister, all white Republicans, and many assertive negroes, who are considered dangerous to the peace of the community, are now under guard and are to be banished from the city.

The negro Carter Peaman, who was expelled last night, got out of the train several miles from the city, and was shot here.

A report is current that John C. Dancy, the negro United States Collector of Customs for this port, has been notified to leave the city and will be waited upon if orders are not summarily obeyed.

The city is now under thorough military and police protection and there is no indication of further outbreaks.

Some cough mixtures smother the cough. But the next breeze fans it into life again.

Better put the cough out. That is, better go deeper and smother the fires of inflammation. Troches cannot do this. Neither can plain cod-liver oil.

But Scott's Emulsion can. The glycerine soothes and makes comfortable; the hypophosphites give power and stability to the nerves; and the oil feeds and strengthens the weakened tissues.

OSCAR VON BECK.

Adopted Daughter of Baron de Thomsen Contesting His Will.

This witness and her husband, Oscar von Beck, came to New York from Denmark to testify in the case of the Baron's will, which should not stand in court, Joseph H. Choate appeared yesterday as cross-examiner, and Mr. W. G. Davies appeared for the contestants.

CHILD'S STORY CONVICTS COLLINS.

Jury Finds Him Guilty on the Testimony of His Little Daughter.

Chiefly upon the testimony of his little nine-year-old daughter Katie, Timothy Collins was found guilty yesterday of manslaughter in the second degree and sentenced by Justice Gildersleeve to two years and four months at hard labor in State Prison.

Collins might have received a sentence of fifteen years for causing the death of his wife on April 9 by striking her on her head during a drunken quarrel, but his record before that fatal night told in his favor.

The jury, in finding him guilty, recommended him to the mercy of the Court, and Assistant District-Attorney McIntyre, who appeared for the prosecution, joined in the plea for clemency.

When the jury returned to Part I. of the Criminal Division of the Supreme Court at 4 o'clock, after deliberating about five hours over the evidence, Collins carefully scanned the faces of the men who were to decide his fate. His lips quivered and his eyes filled with tears. He arose mechanically to hear the verdict; he walked equally mechanically to the bar to receive his sentence.

There was nothing of the bravado about him, he was not even stolid, but simply crushed and heartbroken and repentant, with sorrow written on every line of his gray face.

In charging the jury earlier in the day Justice Gildersleeve told them to disregard the evidence given by little Katie on Thursday, except such parts of it as were corroborated by other testimony, as the child's statements were not made under oath.

In summing up for the defence Lawyer O'Hare intimated that a husband has a right under just provocation to chastise his wife.

A negro lawyer named Scott was also banished and left the city before morning. The Democrats hired one of Pinkerton's negro detectives to associate with the negroes several weeks and his investigation, it is said, revealed that the two lawyers and the other negroes mentioned were ring-leaders, who were inciting their race to violence.

W.G. DAVIES, LAWYER.

Adopted Daughter's Story.

The first witness called yesterday was Mrs. Von Beck, a stylishly dressed young woman, with beautiful blue eyes and luxuriant hair of a deep reddish brown. Her face flushed and her voice slightly trembled as she made her replies to her counsel.

"You were treated as one of the family and married with your parents' consent?" "Oh, yes, entirely so. I had no idea until my marriage that I was only an adopted daughter. When the Baroness died I got one-third of her estate. She left jewelry and silverware principally. She made no will."

John Beck, the Baron's former coachman, was the next witness. "The Baroness," he testified, "often said that the other members of the family didn't like Mrs. Von Beck. My poor Sylvia, the Baroness would say, 'they do not like her, but she is my darling.'"

Oscar von Beck was the next witness. He is dignified in appearance, expresses himself well in English, is forty-two years old, and wears a reddish mustache with a slight military curl.

"I married Miss Sylvia," he said on direct examination, "in New York on February 17, 1872. After our engagement I asked the Baron for his consent to the marriage. He then told me that she was only his adopted daughter. 'You know,' he said, 'that we Americans do not give our daughters much of a dowry.' 'Baron,' I replied, 'I don't want your money. I want your daughter.' He also told me that Sylvia did not know she was only an adopted daughter, and he made me promise not to tell, as he loved her as dearly as if she were his real daughter, and intended to leave her an equal share in his estate with his other children."

Mr. Choate severely cross-examined the witness, seeking to bring out the fact that Von Beck had cruelly incited his supposed father-in-law. The hearing will be resumed on Monday.

History of the Testator.

Baron de Thomsen made his fortune as a commission merchant in Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, and received his title from Emperor Dom Pedro. In 1870 he came to this city, became naturalized and established himself in business in Wall Street.

He was a prominent figure about town, as he was in the presence and military bearing, dressed with great taste and entertained liberally. He was fond of playing cards, and was a daily visitor to Delmonico's. In his will, executed on March 4, 1882, he appointed as his executors Hugo Albinio de Thomsen, his son; Henry Johannes Riedel, of Brooklyn, and Gustavo Fedlerman, of Rio Grande do Sul, his partner. The bulk of his fortune was left to his son Hugo and his daughter, Pepita.

His adopted daughter, Sylvia, had been abandoned by her parents and was known as Lora when the adoption was sanctioned by the Court of Common Pleas. The Baron loved her dearly and brought her up in great luxury. It was while she was abroad in 1880 that she became engaged to Oscar von Beck. They were married in this city in February, 1882, and went to live in Copenhagen. Von Beck quarrelled with his father-in-law and wrote him threatening letters. Baroness de Thomsen died in November, 1885. The Baron, whose health began to fail, destroyed a will which he had made and executed the one over which the contest is now going on. Joseph H. Choate, Hartford, Conn., and Walter R. H. Hardingham, the witnesses to the execution of the document, have testified that the Baron was competent when he signed it.

THE contest over the $1,000,000 fortune left by Baron Christian de Thomsen, who died at the age of seventy-six years in the Buckingham Hotel on May 28 last, was resumed before Surrogate Arnold yesterday. Mrs. Sylvia von Beck, whom he took from the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum in this city in 1874, when she was only five years old, and adopted as his daughter, is the contestant.

She alleges that his last will, by which she is given the income of $25,000, was signed while he was of sound mind, and was obtained by fraud, undue influence and coercion. She also alleges that the will is void because his daughter, Pepita Elvira Elizabeth, the widow of Johannes Schiller, of Hamburg, Germany, to whom a large amount of real estate is devised, is a non-resident alien and unauthorized by law to hold real estate. Mrs. Von Beck and her husband, Oscar, who live in Copenhagen, Denmark, came to this country last month for the special purpose of fighting the will. The contestant in the present proceedings is represented by William G. Davies, while Joseph H. Choate and Louis C. Raegner appear for the will.
