DOLAN TO BE ONE OF THE WITNESSES.

General Gillespie Evinces Great Interest in the Man Who Defied Armour.

General Gillespie, when seen at his house, No. 40 East Fifty-third street, said that it was not intended to sit here longer than one day.

"There are many witnesses offered here," he added, "and among them I know are a great many cranks. We shall call, when the time comes, witnesses whose names are given to us by Major Lee and General Miles."

"There are officers and men," he added, "running through his papers, whose testimony is mainly cumulative and corroborative. The first of these is the Sixty-ninth and Seventy-first regiments. This one says that the canned beef was not rotten, but was boiled; another that it caused sickness; one here said that it seemed to putrefy in the stomach instead of digesting."

Thomas F. DeLin.

His remarkable affidavit against the Chicago packers makes it necessary that he be called to give his important testimony.

"I am prepared to testify before any board as to these facts, which came under my observation, and to tell all I know about the putrid matter which was served to our soldiers."—Former Quartermaster-Sergeant FRED E. DALY.

INDIAN WAR VETERAN REPUDIATES BAD BEEF.

"I am prepared to testify before any board as to these facts, which came under my observation, and to tell all I know about the putrid matter which was served to our soldiers."—Former Quartermaster-Sergeant FRED E. DALY.

Daly is a veteran Indian fighter, having served with distinction under Major Reno in the battle of Little Big Horn, where General Custer's entire command was destroyed by the Sioux on June 26, 1876. Daly was shot through the neck and bears the scars to this day. He was a hunter and over his life to the fact that on that ill-fated day he, in company with four officers, was detailed to escort the pack train.

"The canned roast beef and the refrigerated beef served to our men in the war was not fit for any human being to eat; much less was it proper food for men in a tropical climate."

"I have served five years in the regular army, and I never saw such looking stuff served to any troops."

As a courtesy to Governor Roosevelt, the Court of Inquiry will sit for one day in New York, at the Army building, where the important testimony that the Colonel of the Rough Riders has to give will be heard.

The session will begin at 11 o'clock, and the Governor will probably be the first witness called.

It will be shown that in August and September the Rough Rider made a written report on the quality of the beef, both canned and dressed, and distinctly stated that it was not a fit ration for hungry soldiers. He experienced all the discomforts that his men suffered, and will tell the truth.

The Court of Inquiry will also hold a session at Governor's Island, where several officers and men of the Thirteenth Infantry will be examined. The testimony gathered at this point will be entirely corroborative, but it will nevertheless be valuable.

Just as soon as the Court completes its labors here it will return to Washington, and from that point Thomas F. Dolan will be called to tell all he knows about the horrors of the Armour's Stock Yards, where he worked as "killing superintendent" for ten years.

Since the Armour offered Dolan $5,000 cash for a retraction of his affidavit the Court of Inquiry has come to regard Dolan's accusations seriously.

Dolan is now in New York, prepared to be summoned. But as it will take him several days to tell all he knows to the discredit of the packing gang, it was thought best to take him on to Washington.

Major Lee will continue to represent General Miles. Some important developments are expected in Washington from Dolan and an officer of a New York regiment, who will testify that he heard orders given to "bury all the rotten meat, as Miles was expected along to-morrow." That was in the Porto Rico campaign.

It will also be shown that magnificent cattle ships, built especially for transatlantic trade, were bought up by the Government, remodelled and converted into refrigerator plants for the recent experiment that cost America so many lives. During the war there were several offers made by contractors to supply the army with fresh beef on the hoof. These offers were turned down, first by the Sub-Commissioners, then by General Egan, then by Secretary Alger.

And for what? For crowded hospitals, for a trust whose acts will be probed and made public before this matter is finished.

Among those who helped him to bid farewell to his home were Robert Livingstone Gerry, Frederick Martin Davis, a nephew of Bradley Martin; Prince Kellough and one of the younger generation of Harvards.

Each one was furnished with a menu decorated especially with an eye to his individual idiosyncrasies. The host himself sketched in the upper left hand corner. There were sporting scenes, shooting parties, Harvard football scenes, and so forth.

All the older friends of the engaged couple took a great interest in the dinner. Mr. William K. Vanderbilt, the elder, did this in the company of Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, Miss Fair's older sister. So did Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, the bridegroom's expectant's mother. She took the opportunity to entertain some friends downstairs at dinner in the room.

He Ran Down a Man in Sixth Avenue and Had to Take Refuge in His Car.

A crowd of indignant people, including the majority of storekeepers in the vicinity of Sixth avenue and Thirty-seventh street, hurried into the street there yesterday morning when a Sixth avenue car ran a man down who was crossing the street. He received a scalp wound six inches long. He was taken into a drug store near by and an ambulance sent for. The car was sent at 11:05 o'clock, but the ambulance did not arrive until an hour later. Meantime the crowd tried to get hold of the motorman, and he finally took refuge inside of the car.

$1.00 DINNER NOT POLITICAL, BUT FOR ALL WORKINGMEN.

Devotion to Good Government the Bond That Is to Unite the Diners—O. H. P. Belmont to Be Invited, David B. Hill and John C. Sheehan to Be Left Out—Every Seat Taken for the $10 Dinner.

It was announced yesterday by the committee having the one dollar Jefferson dinner in charge that there is an important change as regards the character of the celebration.

It is to be a dinner of workingmen, and not of Democrats. The memory of Jefferson is to be honored not because he was a Democrat, but as an expression of devotion to the principles underlying all good government.

It is expected by the leaders of the movement that partisan questions will be ignored entirely, except so far as they may relate definitely to the interests of labor.

The following list of vice-presidents was given out last night by George H. Warren, chairman of the Press Committee:

Bishop Potter, Felix Adler, Samuel Gompers, Robert Fulton Oeding, William Dean Howells, the Rev. Edward Matthews, the Rev. Lyman Abbott, John S. Parsons, the Rev. J. M. W. McKim, Ernest H. Crosby and the Hon. Oswald Dwinig Hills.

It is not yet known, however, whether they will accept.

The form of invitation was decided upon by the committee yesterday afternoon. It is carefully worded, so as to express fully the ideas of those in charge of the dinner, and reads as follows:

Here is an invitation. Your presence is requested at a dinner to be given under the auspices of the Workingmen of New York on Wednesday, April 19, at 7 o'clock, at the Grand Central Palace, New York, in honor of the memory of Thomas Jefferson, and as an expression of devotion to the principles underlying all good government.

MORE BONES FROM WINDSOR RUINS.

Mass of Charred Bones Sorted Into Semblance of Three Skeletons.

Remains No. 11, found by Inspector Montgomery, fifteen feet from Forty-seventh street and forty feet from Fifth avenue. Supposed to be the body of Alice Kelly, an employe of the hotel. That name was on an envelope found on the body.

Remains No. 12, found by Inspector W. J. Dunne, 125 feet from Fifth avenue, on the Forty-seventh street line. No clothing near the fragments and no marks of identification.

Remains No. 13, found by Inspectors W. J. Dunne and Daly, eighty feet from Fifth avenue and on the Forty-seventh street line. No identification.

Excavations at the Windsor Hotel ruins go below the water level yesterday. Pumps were piled all day yesterday. Fragments of a skull, vertebrae and other bones were found. When reconstructed according to the cursory sketches made by the police, the blackened remains seemed to form the remains of three bodies, as enumerated above.

Several thousand articles, few of any intrinsic value, and fewer still of any value as mementos of the victims, were found. The following communication was received last night from Mr. Leland:

New York, March 24, 1899. To the Editor of the Journal: On my arrival in Chicago this evening, I learned from my physician, Dr. Leonard E. Pilske, that he had been called to the bedside of a gentleman named who lost his life in a fire at the Windsor Hotel last night. He was buried in the city of Chicago.

This positively must not be, and I trust that the friends of the victims of the Windsor Hotel disaster on Friday last would ultimately be buried in the city of Chicago.

It never should be said that a Leland would ever be any of his guests or employees at Potter's restaurant, under such circumstances.

Benefit for Employes. The Twentieth Street Music Hall, has offered his theatre for a benefit for the employes of the Windsor Hotel Sunday night. His offer was accepted by Mayor Van Wyck and Mr. Leland, asking that a committee be appointed to superintend the matter.

The record as it now stands is twenty-three dead, fifty missing and a bushel or more of detached bones. The injured in hospitals and other places are doing steadily.

FORMER STOCK BROKER BANKRUPT FOR $34,644.

Charles W. Durant, who gives his place of business and residence as the Hotel St. Andrew, Seventy-second street and Broadway, filed a petition in bankruptcy yesterday with liabilities $34,644 and no assets.

Among the creditors are Eugene Tompkins, of Boston, $2,019, for lease of a theatre in 1889.

Mr. Durant was reputed to be worth $30,000 a dozen years ago, but lost it all. He was a Wall Street broker for several years, and was once a member of the New York Stock Exchange.

He backed a well-known actress in a play in 1889 and was reported to have lost a large sum thereby. Besides the claim of Eugene Tompkins for rent of a theatre in Boston there are other debts mentioned in the schedule, such as printing, $174; photographs, $341; lithographing, $501.

Mrs. Beccari, a midwife, of No. 50 Mulberry street, is said by the police to have left the baby a week ago yesterday at the home of the De Montes. They say she paid $5 to have it cared for. On Monday the baby was taken by Mrs. De Monte to the Mulberry street station, whence it was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where it was recognized as a baby that had been brought there before, but not received. Who the baby belongs to is a mystery.
