"WOULD WERE SIX JULIETS UPON THOSE HANDS." --Romeo.

Maude Adams. Odette Tyler. Julia Arthur.

An Invasion of Juliets. Shakespeare's lovely heroine to be depicted simultaneously by Julia Arthur, Maude Adams and Odette Tyler in local theatres.

Contemplated Stage Invasion of Three, Perhaps Four, Juliets.

SET FOR APRIL AND MAY.

Julia Arthur, Maude Adams and Odette Tyler Sure to Play the Part.

JULIA MARLOWE LIKELY TO DO IT.

This Will Not Break the Record, for Once, Twenty-five Years Ago, There Were Six Juliets in New York on One Night.

New York, it is said in theatrical circles, is to have a surfeit of Juliets to signalize the closing of the present dramatic season. Three actresses will essay interpretations of the love and anguish of the daughter of the Capulets at approximately the same time. These are Julia Arthur, Maude Adams and Odette Tyler.

All of this brings to the memory of the old theatre goers the adage that time repeats itself. Something like twenty-five years ago no less than six Juliets were seen here in a single day at the same performance.

The occasion was a benefit tendered to George Ringgold, a favorite English actor of that time, imported by Jarrett & Palmer. The performance took place in Booth's Theatre, then at Sixth Avenue and Twenty-third Street.

Maude Adams' Juliet will be supported by William Faversham's Romeo and J. K. Hackett's Mercutio. It is interesting to note that Miss Adams' plans were the first to be given to the public.

Odette Tyler, finding that domesticity on her husband's farm at Sheperdstown, Va., palled, has induced him to join her in returning to the footlights. In stagedom he is R. D. McLean. So early in April, he will be Romeo to her portrayal of Juliet at the Herald Square Theatre.

Julia Arthur has announced her intention of putting on this play at the Boston theatre during the week beginning May 15. No expense will be spared in making the production a notable one, according to her management, and her past efforts insure a notable condition with effective appointments. There is doubt about her being able to secure a desirable plaything, in this city. The Broadway Theatre is about the only one holding out any promise of time for her and this prospect is contingent. Wallace's Theatre, her favorite home, is not available—all time being "booked."

Some argue that managers antagonistic to her are conspiring to keep her out of the city. There are, on the other hand, a host of admirers of her talents who would be pleased to see her "break in."

Such a trinitarian will be interesting if from the other point in the essentially distinctive types of Juliet depicted.

Then comes the whisper that Julia Marlowe may conceive a fancy to become the fourth of the aspiring ones.

DR. PARKHURST SCORES DEBTOR CHRISTIANS. Refers, Though Not by Name, to a "Church Across the River" That Paid 14 Cents on the Dollar.

In his second sermon on the "Law and the Gospel," the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, of the Madison Square Presbyterian Church, yesterday morning touched upon the subject of the indifference of some persons avowedly Christians in regard to their debts.

"If," said he, "there is one man more than another that I cannot believe in, it is the man who goes to bed at night and goes to bed with a conscience that is not at all clear."

A little while ago a church on the other side of the river suspended—went out of business exactly, but went out of the gospel; failed in the gospel and settled with its creditors for the dollar.

The pastor of that church is now browsing in other fields; that is to say, he has found another outlet; his parishioners have scattered to other churches, but so far as I have been informed, somebody is still subtracting 14 from 100 and pondering the remaining 86, and wondering what exactly the late pastor of the late church meant when he used to preach such texts as "Give no man anything, but to love one another."

Murdered and Robbed at Red Bank. Sidney Chase was found unconscious yesterday near his home on Leighton Avenue, Red Bank, N. J., with marks which indicate that he was foully dealt with. His watch and other valuables were missing. He died a short time later. Chase was a painter and with his two children, lived with his mother. He was about forty years old.

MISS VIRGINIA FAIR AT LENTEN SERVICE.

Fifth Avenue was filled with carriages carrying their occupants to the Palm Sunday services at 11 o'clock yesterday forenoon, when the front door of Mrs. Hermann Oetrich's mansion opened and on the threshold appeared Miss Virginia Fair, soon to be the bride of William K. Vanderbilt, Jr. Miss Fair was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Oetrich, and she walked quickly to the carriage waiting at the curb and was borne rapidly to St. Patrick's Cathedral.

She is a strict Catholic and had determined to devote the last Sunday but one before her marriage to worship in the Cathedral. Her costume was a striking proof of her preference for simple effects and quiet tones, which is said to be one of her most prominent characteristics. She wore a gown of dark material, severely plain in pattern, which set off her trim figure. Over it she wore a jacket of Persian lamb's wool and a coat with trimmings of violets, the flowers lending the only touch of color to the costume. For the rest there was a heavy, handsome sable bon and white kid gloves.

But simple and plain though her costume, no one in the crowded cathedral was noticed with more interest than Miss Fair. She seemed unconscious of the eyes bent upon her, so occupied was she with her devotions.

After the services she was driven back to her sister's home, where, according to her custom, young Mr. Vanderbilt dropped in a little later to take luncheon with his fiancée and her sister.

Palm Sunday was generally observed. The beautiful weather brought out the church-going world in greater numbers than in years before, and most of the fashionable sanctuaries throughout the city were thronged. The social world especially was well represented on this first day of Holy Week, and the Sunday entertainment, which has to some extent become a fashionable custom, was almost entirely suspended yesterday.

Even many of those who did not attend church recognized the day and what it signified by wearing bits of palm in their hats or pinned to the laps of their coats.

MISS HELEN GOULD FEEDS THE WORKMEN.

Mortuary List. Identified dead, 11. Unidentified dead, 16. Total, 27. Missing, 45.

Equipped for work with big white aprons, Miss Helen Gould and Mrs. Seligman graced their kitchens last night, personally directing the details of preparing supper for the laboring men, police and inspectors at the Windsor Hotel rooms.

Nine hundred men enjoyed the generous meals supplied.

The work of providing food for the army devolving into the Windsor's ashes has become a labor of considerable magnitude. Loaves of bread by the hundred, butter, coffee, ham, chickens, salads and other articles of food in great quantities arrive daily at the Gould and Seligman residences, and are given out without stint.

A charred human toe in a woman's slipper was the grisly yield of the Windsor Hotel mints yesterday.

During the afternoon thousands of Sunday strollers got as far as the fire lines in an effort to witness the work of excavation. Many came from the country, and were sadly disappointed when stopped half a block away from the ruins.

A wedding ring marked "C. M. to E. T. L., October 11, 1896," a gold ring with a cluster of rubies, a match safe marked "E. D. M. W." a prayer book with the name "Mrs. Williams" in the fly leaf, and several articles of ladies' clothing marked "Whitmore" were unearthed yesterday.

CHURCH BARS OFF TRUCKS. The teamsters and the police are having controversies almost every day on account of the notices which have been posted prohibiting trucks and business wagons being driven in the thoroughfares bounding the grounds of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine on Cathedral Heights.

Many of the teamsters contend that it is unfair to exclude them from the use of the public thoroughfares in question, while carriages and pleasure vehicles are permitted to pass without molestation. The Cathedral authorities have, by permission of the city officials, caused the prohibitory notices to be posted, and the police have been instructed to see that the teamsters obey the order.
