

MRS. CLARKE THANKS THE JOURNAL AND ALL WHO HELPED FIND BABY MARION.

I never expect to have such another moment in my life—that in which I saw my child and took her in my arms this evening. I want to thank the Journal for what it has done—for the much that it has done—its search for Marion, the widespread news of her loss.

HISTORY OF THE STOLEN BABY CASE.

How Marion Clark Disappeared with the Nurse Hired a Week Before.

TREATS OF KIDNAPPERS

They Were Ignored and the Matter Placed in Police Hands. Many False Clues.

Marion Clark was stolen from the home of her parents, No. 150 East Sixty-fifth street, on the morning of Sunday, May 21. She disappeared from Central Park with her nurse, a young woman who had entered the service of the Clarks under the name of Carrie Jones.

In the mystery that surrounded the case from the beginning, in the number of false clues that sprang up like mushrooms in many difficult localities, and in the success that attended the efforts of the kidnapers to elude pursuit, the crime is one of the most remarkable in the police annals of this country.

The feature which distinguished this from other cases of child stealing was the absence of known motive. Arthur Clark, the father, is comparatively a poor man. He earns a good salary as a travelling salesman for the publishing house of Knight & Brown, in the Presbyterian building, Fifth avenue and Twentieth street, and is dependent upon that for a livelihood.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark lived at a boarding house at the address given, and had two children, Marion, twenty months old, and an infant of three months. They married late in life, and they had no enemies who could have wished to bring upon the young mother and father the cruel grief that the theft of their child has caused.

The nurse who disappeared with the child had been engaged by Mrs. Clark only five days before through an advertisement appearing in a morning paper a few days previous. In answer to Mrs. Clark's letter the girl had called at the house.

No Warning of Danger. There was no precaution that warned the mother of Marion Clark as she questioned the woman who was soon to rob her of her child. The frank answers directed suspicion and the applicant's appearance was such as to prejudice Mrs. Clark in her favor.

She had come, she said simply, from the little town of Deposit, N. Y., and her only friend in this city was a woman by the name of Johnson, with whom she lived in a room downtown.

This friend, the girl explained, was at work in a restaurant, and had promised to get her a place there, but she preferred service.

She was neatly, even well dressed, and expressed a fondness for children that decided Mrs. Clark to take her home. The girl of twenty-one, who claimed to be a stranger in the city, she gave the name of Carrie Jones, and entered the service of the Clarks the next day.

Was a Model Servant. In the five days that the woman worked as nurse, she proved herself a model servant. She relieved Mrs. Clark of the care of the two children and watched over them constantly.

She did not wish a night each week to visit her friends, having no friends, no claim upon her time. She refused to do so, and she did not speak again of woman in any way that would detract from the purpose of securing an exclusive news story. This theory the police held to tenaciously.

In all that portion of the Park the father searched, and as the minutes went by and no trace of the child was found misgivings came. But they were not serious, and he hastened home, expecting to find his daughter there before him.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark ate alone, and dinner was finished, and still Marion did not come. The father went back to the Park and at 4 o'clock he told the police at the Central Park station that his child could not be found.

The police told him that the nurse was probably lost in the Park, but would be found. Almost as they were reassuring him a boy brought to the Clark home a note that took from the mother as she read it almost every ray of hope and made her a prey to fears as terrible as they were vague. The note confessed the kidnapping of little Marion. It was printed by hand and read:

Note from Kidnappers. "Mrs. Clark: Do not look for your nurse and baby. They are safe in our possession, where they will remain for the present. If the matter is kept out of the hands of the police and newspapers, you will get your baby back, safe and sound. If, instead, you make a great time of it and publish it all over, we will see to it that you will never see her alive again. We are driven to this by the fact that

Detective Sergeant Merlhy. He has been Captain McClusky's right-hand man in the kidnaping case. He was sent to St. John, and after identifying little Marion, he brought her home on the Journal's special train.

We cannot get work, and one of us has a child dying through want of proper treatment and nourishment. "Your baby is safe and in good hands. The nurse girl is still with her. If everything is kept quiet you will hear from us on Monday or Tuesday."

Ignored the Threat. In spite of the threat the note contained against the life of his daughter, Mr. Clark did not hesitate, but placed the letter in the hands of the police and trusted to them to ferret out the criminals.

Then began such a chase as New York has never seen here. Detectives were sent to trace the missing nurse girl and the stolen child. Every positive clue seemed to end with their disappearance in Central Park.

The note from the abductors was brought to the Clark home by Freddie Lung, a bright boy of thirteen, who lives at No. 248 West Fifty-first street. He had received it from a woman answering the description of Carrie Jones, at sixty-first street and Second avenue. She had given him a dime to deliver it, and the boy had watched her as she went into the house.

Then sprang up a multitude of clues and theories. The note had, in its composition and markings, betrayed a familiarity with the preparation of articles for the press, and this led to the supposition that a reputable newspaper had planned the entire affair for the purpose of securing an exclusive news story. This theory the police held to tenaciously.

To the wiles of the father and mother was added the cruel suspicion that in some manner they had been responsible. The hints of connivance and rumors of possible family secrets drove the tortured mother to the very brink of madness. The rumors and suspicions were as unkind as they were untrue. The golden curls of little Marion Clark were a halo around the head of the saint her father worshiped. She was his life. In the hours of leisure his time was spent playing with her, and the mother watched close by, no less proud than he of their fair-haired, blue-eyed daughter.

Another False Clue. Then came a clue that Carrie Jones was really a girl named Carr, of Deposit. The Journal located the Carr girls. The clue was only another straw to break under the great hopes of Marion's parents. A woman named Sarah Johnson was taken into custody, only to be released.

Whitka, Kan., June 1.—Mrs. Allie Andrews, who lives near Wichita, was adjudged insane in the District Court today. She is, in fact, a raving maniac. Listening to continuous thunder for twelve hours brought on this calamity.

At 6 p. m. yesterday a storm came up, and it began to thunder, loud peals sounding every few minutes throughout the night. The noise kept half the people in town awake.

Mrs. Andrews was alone in her house with a sick baby. She is of a nervous temperament, and was extremely terrified. Her house was a half mile from any other and she could not leave it.

SAVED FROM JAIL BY ALGER'S NIECE.

Deserter Engaged to Miss Campbell Pardoned and Wedded.

HER "PULL" WAS STRONG.

The Young Soldier Had Pleaded His Mother's Illness as an Excuse.

Chillicothe, Mo., June 1.—Robert L. Mooney, former private of Company H, Fourth Missouri Volunteers, returned here yesterday afternoon after having a varied experience since he left with his company in May, 1868.

While the regiment was encamped at Falls Church, Virginia, he made the acquaintance of Miss Anna Campbell, niece of Secretary Alger. When the regiment was ordered to Camp Meade, near Harrisburg, Pa., he carried with him the promise to become his wife when the war was over.

Then the regiment was moved to Camp Wetherill, near Greenville, S. C., where Mooney was arrested for desertion and sentenced to one year in prison at St. Francis Barracks, St. Augustine.

Mooney pleaded in extenuation that he had received word that his mother was sick and needed him badly. Miss Campbell at once began to use her influence to secure his pardon. Officers and men who liked Mooney added their efforts to hers, but it was the Virginia girl who worked the strongest pull, and who is held to be almost entirely responsible for a pardon which President McKinley issued to Mooney a short time ago.

The pardon brought not only freedom, but restoration to full citizenship. Immediately upon his release Mooney went to Falls Church and he and Miss Campbell were married.

"OCULT" DOG DID TRICKS IN A CHURCH.

Bozzie Performed Wonders Before an Admiring Audience of 300 Chicago People.

Chicago, Ill., June 1.—Down in Englewood a Scotch collie, Bozzie by name, has been preached about and has performed marvelous feats in the Stewart Avenue Universalist Church.

The animal's owner claims occult powers for her. Last night an audience of 300 persons watched "Bozzie" count, tell numbers and do other things which are usually considered accomplishments when performed by a ten-year-old boy.

A little girl whispered her age to Mr. Clason and then placed her hand on the dog's shaggy head, at the same time asking the age. The dog answered correctly. Bills of $10, $5 and $1 were placed on the floor and the dog barked the denomination of each bill.

"Bozzie" is four years old and has been trained from a puppy. Her gift of "occult" powers was discovered accidentally by Mr. Clason.

Julia Marlowe, who sailed for England yesterday.

AFTER the most successful season in her career, Miss Julia Marlowe sailed for Europe yesterday on the steamship Fuerst Bismarck. She goes direct to London, where she is to read a paper on "Women of the Stage" before the International Council of Women.

Of all the actresses in America Miss Marlowe was selected for this high honor, and she feels greatly flattered at the distinction.

Miss Marlowe will spend a week or two in Paris in July and the remainder of her vacation will be passed in Switzerland. She will return to New York early in September, and will then begin rehearsals of her new play, "Barbara Frietchie," which is to receive its initiation at the Criterion (formerly the Lyric) Theatre, in this city, in October.

Later Miss Marlowe will probably do "When Knighthood Was in Flower," a dramatization of Charles Major's novel of the same name, and, perhaps, "La Reine Flamette."

FORAKER FIGHTS AGAINST HANNA.

After Four Years' Silence He Again Throws Down the Gauntlet and Declares in Favor of Daugherty, Hanna's Enemy, for Governor.

MARK HANNA.

Columbus, O., June 1.—Marcus A. Hanna, President maker, United States Senator and political dictator, now has the fight of his life on his hands.

With the Presidential election approaching, and at a time when he is extremely anxious to have the party organization under his control, he finds himself on the night before the gubernatorial nomination in his own State with only the remnant of a following.

The majority of the Republican leaders who made it possible for him to succeed in the past have deserted him, and Hanna's only hope is in making liberal promises of Federal patronage under the recent civil service ruling. This scheme he is pushing hard tonight, and with the aid of postmasters and other Federal employes is handling out offices left and right.

The leading candidate in the field for Governor is Harry M. Daugherty, chairman of the State Executive Committee. Daugherty was Hanna's attorney in the Senatorial investigation last Winter, and has been considered his chief lieutenant.

Being a shrewd politician, Daugherty saw the handwriting, and, knowing that a revolt against Hanna was coming sooner or later, he decided to cut loose from the boss and stand on his own platform. This action made Hanna furious, and he immediately drew his knife and went after Daugherty's scalp.

Nash is Hanna's Choice. The Senator declared immediately upon his arrival yesterday that Judge Nash, of this city, was the Administration's candidate. As soon as this became known there was a conference of the anti-Hanna forces, and as a result it is stated tonight, there is an understanding between the several anti-Hanna interests that will line them up solidly against Hanna and Nash in to-morrow's contest.

The most sensational incident of the day and the heaviest blow at Hanna's hopes was that dealt by Senator Joseph B. Foraker. Perceiving the strong sentiment against Hanna, and with an eye for his own future, Senator Foraker threw down the gauntlet and, after a silence of four years, entered the arena.

Senator Foraker declared that he did not propose that the Democratic press should run the Republican party.

"We know how it's done ourselves," said Hanna.

The remark was greeted with loud cheering.

Daugherty's support to-night secured the support of the committees and the organization, but Hanna still claims a majority of the delegates.

The Lord Told Her to Kill Her Children. But by the Same Command She Notified the Police and All Are Safe.

"The Lord commanded me to kill my five children, my husband and myself," exclaimed a well-dressed and pretty young woman yesterday, as she walked into the office of Chief of Police Murphy, of Jersey City.

The chief made a complaint and had the woman committed to the county jail to await examination. The children were sent home. The unfortunate mother is Mrs. Barbara Frietchie, who two weeks ago attempted to drown herself.

IT MERITS ATTENTION. A NEW PREPARATION WHICH CURES DYSPEPSIA AND STOMACH TROUBLE.

Remarkable Curative Properties. A new remedy, which may revolutionize the treatment of stomach troubles, has recently been placed before the public, and bears the indorsement of many leading physicians and scientific men.

The remedy is not a wonderful secret discovery nor a patent medicine, neither is it claimed to cure anything except indigestion and stomach troubles, with which nine-tenths of our nation are afflicted.

The remedy is in the form of pleasant tasting tablets or lozenges containing vegetable and fruit essences, pure aseptic pepsin (free from animal impurities), bismuth and Golden Seal; they are sold by druggists generally under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Many interesting experiments made with these tablets show that they possess remarkable digestive power, one grain of the active principle being sufficient to thoroughly digest 3,000 times its own weight of lean meat, eggs, oatmeal or similar wholesome foods; these tablets do not act on the bowels like after-dinner pills, nor in fact do they act upon any particular organ, but the manner in which they cure all forms of indigestion is this: They act entirely upon the food eaten, digesting it completely, nourishing every tissue and nerve in the body; they simply perform the work of digestion, thus giving the weak stomach rest and assistance sufficient to enable it to recover its normal strength. This is the reason so many pretended cures have signally failed; they do not furnish the digestive power, which is the one thing above all others that the stomach of the dyspeptic lacks, and unless that lack is supplied, it is waste of time to attempt to restore the enfeebled stomach by means of "tonics," "stomach bitters" and "pills"; no permanent good can result from their use.

If the stomach can be rested and assisted in the work of digestion it will very soon recover; this is the secret and the whole secret of the remarkable success of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, a remedy practically unknown a year ago, and now the most popular, widely used dyspepsia remedy, everywhere a success secured almost entirely on its merits, as it has never been extensively advertised.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are now sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package; if he hasn't them in stock he will order them for you from his wholesale house. They are made by the F. A. Stuart Co., chemists, Marshall, Mich., who will be pleased to send information and testimonials from every State in the Union.
