

HAVE MADE FAMOUS THE SPORING PLACES OF THE JOURNAL:

ism, Charles F. Mathison; Athletics, Robert W. Edgren; Yachting, Duncan Curry; Rowing, A. H. C. Mitchell; Harness Racing, C. A. McCully.

SWING HARD, BUT IN VAIN.

Griffith's Curves Gave New Yorks a Severe Attack of Pain.

COLTS GOT EVERYTHING, AND SURPRISED THE NATIVES BY THEIR CLEVER WORK IN FIELDING.

THE GIANTS COMING HOME.

For Many Days to Rest in Peace and Not on Other Fields to Sady Room.

Results and Attendance.

Table with columns for Club, Won, Lost, P.C. Rows include Chicago, Cleveland, Baltimore, Boston, Louisville, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, New York, Washington, St. Louis.

Poughkeepsie Committee Calls on Mr. Van Duzer.

Standing of the Clubs. Chicago, Ill., May 28.—The Giants failed to secure the third game of the series with the Colts today.

Chicago, Ill., May 28.—The Giants failed to secure the third game of the series with the Colts today. The game was the best of the season, fairly bristling with excitement from start to finish.

To break the Jonah which has hung over the team, Anson sent the visitors to the bat, and for an instant it seemed that the hoodoo had only been made more spiteful.

In their opening six rounds the Giants landed safely only twice, and during that time some remarkable fielding was taking place.

The seventh round was the one in which Griffith showed his magnificent qualities. It was full of question marks and exclamations, and when the last man went out the entire crowd arose to pay its noisy respects to Griffith.

The Giants scored their only runs in the eighth, when Van Halren opened with a single that bounded high over Griffith's head.

'T WAS A SNAP FOR YALE. All the Lehigh Players Had Buttered Fingers and Couldn't Hold the Ball.

Table with columns for Yale and Lehigh players and statistics. Includes names like Keaton, Farnham, Letson, etc.

Stafford's Home Run Won. Louisville, Ky., May 26.—Today's game was close and exciting, and the result was in doubt until the last man had been retired in the ninth inning.

Table with columns for Louisville and Boston players and statistics. Includes names like Stafford, McCarty, Darter, etc.

Chicago, 6; New York, 2; Cleveland, 4; Philadelphia, 2; Baltimore, 5; Boston, 4; Louisville, 1; Pittsburgh, 8; Washington and St. Louis, Rain.

run—Stafford. Three-base hit—Long. Two-base hits—Duffy, Klobedanz, Johnson. Sacrifice hits—Stafford, Rogers. Double plays—Rogers and Weiden; Collins, Lowe and Tenney. Wild pitch—Sullivan. Time—One hour and forty-seven minutes. Umpire—McDermott.

Almost a General Riot. Pittsburgh, May 26.—General Hurst was in the hands of a mob after to-day's game and was saved serious injury by the Pittsburgh players dragging him into the club house.

Blake Made a Hair-Raising Catch. Cleveland, Ohio, May 28.—Wilson, for the Indians, pitched a good game. The visitors did not get a run until two men were out in the ninth, when a three-base hit by O'Leary and singles by Cooley, Lajoie and Delehanty gave them two.

Table with columns for Cleveland and Philadelphia players and statistics. Includes names like Soefer, Childs, Burk, etc.

To-day's League Games. Brooklyn at Pittsburgh. Baltimore at Cleveland. Boston at Cincinnati. Washington at Louisville. Philadelphia at Chicago.

Giants on Their Way Home. The New York baseball team left Chicago last night after the completion of the game and will arrive in New York to-night.

Western League. Kansas City, 7; Grand Rapids, 4. St. Paul, 10; Detroit, 7. Minneapolis, 6; Columbus, 10. Milwaukee, 7; Indianapolis, 11.

New England League. At Taunton, Mass.—Taunton, 4; Newport, 1. At Brockton, Mass.—Brockton, 9; Pawtucket, 7 (ten innings). At New Bedford, Mass.—New Bedford, 4; Fall River, 2.

PO'KEEPSIE CALLS ON VAN DUZER.

Committeemen Tell Him About the Tides That Happen on the Hudson.

MUSTRACE DOWN STREAM. Direction of the Course for the College Boat Races Will Be Settled Later On.

TIGERS CHANCES LOOM UP. Played So Well Against Cornell That They Begin to Look Like Champions.

Princeton, May 28.—Princeton defeated Cornell today, and the form shown by the Tigers has caused their prospects for winning championship honors on the diamond this season to assume a very rosy hue.

Table with columns for Princeton and Cornell players and statistics. Includes names like Bradley, Smith, Alford, etc.

Princeton, May 28.—Princeton defeated Cornell today, and the form shown by the Tigers has caused their prospects for winning championship honors on the diamond this season to assume a very rosy hue.

Mr. Van Duzer said he would endeavor to procure enough facts about Hudson River peculiarities to tide them over the difficult problem, and the committee intimated that unless the race was rowed down stream the entire undertaking would be in danger of capsizing.

The conference took place in Mr. Van Duzer's office yesterday afternoon, and was the result of Mr. Van Duzer's statement that the race would have to be rowed up stream owing to the tide, which is scheduled to run the wrong way at 5 o'clock on the evening of June 25.

As a result of the eloquent appeals of the members of the committee, Mr. Van Duzer said he would do all in his power to have the race rowed down stream, and if his investigations showed that the tide would be at all favorable on the day set for the race, he would decide on a down-river race.

On that point, but it was finally agreed that the committee should keep an accurate daily record of tide conditions from now till June 15, and submit the same to Mr. Van Duzer, who will then make a final decision.

The reason the citizens of Poughkeepsie are so strenuous about a down-river race is that the finish is just abreast of the city, while an up-river course would bring the finish two and a half miles above town.

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

PO'KEEPSIE CALLS ON VAN DUZER.

Committeemen Tell Him About the Tides That Happen on the Hudson.

MUSTRACE DOWN STREAM. Direction of the Course for the College Boat Races Will Be Settled Later On.

TIGERS CHANCES LOOM UP. Played So Well Against Cornell That They Begin to Look Like Champions.

Princeton, May 28.—Princeton defeated Cornell today, and the form shown by the Tigers has caused their prospects for winning championship honors on the diamond this season to assume a very rosy hue.

Table with columns for Princeton and Cornell players and statistics. Includes names like Bradley, Smith, Alford, etc.

Princeton, May 28.—Princeton defeated Cornell today, and the form shown by the Tigers has caused their prospects for winning championship honors on the diamond this season to assume a very rosy hue.

Mr. Van Duzer said he would endeavor to procure enough facts about Hudson River peculiarities to tide them over the difficult problem, and the committee intimated that unless the race was rowed down stream the entire undertaking would be in danger of capsizing.

The conference took place in Mr. Van Duzer's office yesterday afternoon, and was the result of Mr. Van Duzer's statement that the race would have to be rowed up stream owing to the tide, which is scheduled to run the wrong way at 5 o'clock on the evening of June 25.

As a result of the eloquent appeals of the members of the committee, Mr. Van Duzer said he would do all in his power to have the race rowed down stream, and if his investigations showed that the tide would be at all favorable on the day set for the race, he would decide on a down-river race.

On that point, but it was finally agreed that the committee should keep an accurate daily record of tide conditions from now till June 15, and submit the same to Mr. Van Duzer, who will then make a final decision.

The reason the citizens of Poughkeepsie are so strenuous about a down-river race is that the finish is just abreast of the city, while an up-river course would bring the finish two and a half miles above town.

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

PO'KEEPSIE CALLS ON VAN DUZER.

Committeemen Tell Him About the Tides That Happen on the Hudson.

MUSTRACE DOWN STREAM. Direction of the Course for the College Boat Races Will Be Settled Later On.

TIGERS CHANCES LOOM UP. Played So Well Against Cornell That They Begin to Look Like Champions.

Princeton, May 28.—Princeton defeated Cornell today, and the form shown by the Tigers has caused their prospects for winning championship honors on the diamond this season to assume a very rosy hue.

Table with columns for Princeton and Cornell players and statistics. Includes names like Bradley, Smith, Alford, etc.

Princeton, May 28.—Princeton defeated Cornell today, and the form shown by the Tigers has caused their prospects for winning championship honors on the diamond this season to assume a very rosy hue.

Mr. Van Duzer said he would endeavor to procure enough facts about Hudson River peculiarities to tide them over the difficult problem, and the committee intimated that unless the race was rowed down stream the entire undertaking would be in danger of capsizing.

The conference took place in Mr. Van Duzer's office yesterday afternoon, and was the result of Mr. Van Duzer's statement that the race would have to be rowed up stream owing to the tide, which is scheduled to run the wrong way at 5 o'clock on the evening of June 25.

As a result of the eloquent appeals of the members of the committee, Mr. Van Duzer said he would do all in his power to have the race rowed down stream, and if his investigations showed that the tide would be at all favorable on the day set for the race, he would decide on a down-river race.

On that point, but it was finally agreed that the committee should keep an accurate daily record of tide conditions from now till June 15, and submit the same to Mr. Van Duzer, who will then make a final decision.

The reason the citizens of Poughkeepsie are so strenuous about a down-river race is that the finish is just abreast of the city, while an up-river course would bring the finish two and a half miles above town.

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

PO'KEEPSIE CALLS ON VAN DUZER.

Committeemen Tell Him About the Tides That Happen on the Hudson.

MUSTRACE DOWN STREAM. Direction of the Course for the College Boat Races Will Be Settled Later On.

TIGERS CHANCES LOOM UP. Played So Well Against Cornell That They Begin to Look Like Champions.

Princeton, May 28.—Princeton defeated Cornell today, and the form shown by the Tigers has caused their prospects for winning championship honors on the diamond this season to assume a very rosy hue.

Table with columns for Princeton and Cornell players and statistics. Includes names like Bradley, Smith, Alford, etc.

Princeton, May 28.—Princeton defeated Cornell today, and the form shown by the Tigers has caused their prospects for winning championship honors on the diamond this season to assume a very rosy hue.

Mr. Van Duzer said he would endeavor to procure enough facts about Hudson River peculiarities to tide them over the difficult problem, and the committee intimated that unless the race was rowed down stream the entire undertaking would be in danger of capsizing.

The conference took place in Mr. Van Duzer's office yesterday afternoon, and was the result of Mr. Van Duzer's statement that the race would have to be rowed up stream owing to the tide, which is scheduled to run the wrong way at 5 o'clock on the evening of June 25.

As a result of the eloquent appeals of the members of the committee, Mr. Van Duzer said he would do all in his power to have the race rowed down stream, and if his investigations showed that the tide would be at all favorable on the day set for the race, he would decide on a down-river race.

On that point, but it was finally agreed that the committee should keep an accurate daily record of tide conditions from now till June 15, and submit the same to Mr. Van Duzer, who will then make a final decision.

The reason the citizens of Poughkeepsie are so strenuous about a down-river race is that the finish is just abreast of the city, while an up-river course would bring the finish two and a half miles above town.

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

PO'KEEPSIE CALLS ON VAN DUZER.

Committeemen Tell Him About the Tides That Happen on the Hudson.

MUSTRACE DOWN STREAM. Direction of the Course for the College Boat Races Will Be Settled Later On.

TIGERS CHANCES LOOM UP. Played So Well Against Cornell That They Begin to Look Like Champions.

Princeton, May 28.—Princeton defeated Cornell today, and the form shown by the Tigers has caused their prospects for winning championship honors on the diamond this season to assume a very rosy hue.

Table with columns for Princeton and Cornell players and statistics. Includes names like Bradley, Smith, Alford, etc.

Princeton, May 28.—Princeton defeated Cornell today, and the form shown by the Tigers has caused their prospects for winning championship honors on the diamond this season to assume a very rosy hue.

Mr. Van Duzer said he would endeavor to procure enough facts about Hudson River peculiarities to tide them over the difficult problem, and the committee intimated that unless the race was rowed down stream the entire undertaking would be in danger of capsizing.

The conference took place in Mr. Van Duzer's office yesterday afternoon, and was the result of Mr. Van Duzer's statement that the race would have to be rowed up stream owing to the tide, which is scheduled to run the wrong way at 5 o'clock on the evening of June 25.

As a result of the eloquent appeals of the members of the committee, Mr. Van Duzer said he would do all in his power to have the race rowed down stream, and if his investigations showed that the tide would be at all favorable on the day set for the race, he would decide on a down-river race.

On that point, but it was finally agreed that the committee should keep an accurate daily record of tide conditions from now till June 15, and submit the same to Mr. Van Duzer, who will then make a final decision.

The reason the citizens of Poughkeepsie are so strenuous about a down-river race is that the finish is just abreast of the city, while an up-river course would bring the finish two and a half miles above town.

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

At the close of the conference Mr. Booth said to a Journal reporter: "We have many excellent reasons for wanting the race rowed down stream. If the course should be laid out upstream there would be great danger to life. The excursion boats would have to anchor an hour before the time for the race, and at the end of the obd tide. Now, when the tide changed, the boats would swing around, drag anchors in many cases, and doubtless crash into each other, with consequent danger to the lives of spectators."

Advertisement for Bicycles. Includes text: 'LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: WE HAVE no 1894, 1895, 1896 shop-worn...'. Also includes 'DUQUESNE MFG. CO., 226 FULTON STREET, Boston Branch, 259 Columbus Ave., Boston, Mass. T. F. TULLY, Mgr.'

Advertisement for Patee Bicycles. Includes text: 'Cut Prices. To make room for a large lot of Bicycles now on route from factory we offer for Thursday, Friday and Saturday Genuine "Patee" Bicycles, 1897 model, up to date, at...'. Also includes 'N. Y. SPORTING GOODS CO., 61 Nassau St., near Maiden Lane.' and 'L.C. JANDORF & CO., 321 BROADWAY.' and 'HERALD CYCLE CO., 110, 112, 114, 116 Nassau St., near Ann.' and 'Bicycle Sale. Bicycles outgrade the so-called high grade. Riders use them once and then always sell them.' and 'MORRIS PARK RACES BY WESTCHESTER RACING ASSOCIATION, 9th Day, Thursday, May 27th. The Eclipse for two years old, the Hunt Steeplechase and four other races. Take 24