

were engaged in concealing the proceeds of a recent robbery is that, even if they should elude to brave the publicity of the old churchyard for such a purpose, it would be unnecessary to go beneath the second slab of the tomb to find a secure hiding place. Once below the upper slab, providing it were returned to its original position, the treasure would be as safe from discovery as if buried a hundred feet deep.

Besides, neither one of these hypotheses takes into account the fact that the building at the rear was also broken into, and it is convenient to consider the two circumstances in conjunction. The window of Dr. Dix's office, which looks out upon the churchyard, was broken with one of the tools taken from the tomb. It must have been hurled through the pane with great force, for it was found in the middle of the room. Nevertheless, a watchman who was sleeping on the same floor was not awakened. Through the hole made by the brick the window catch was unfastened, and the burglars were free to climb into the room.

Office Thoroughly Searched.
The condition of the apartment when it was entered on the following morning, bore eloquent testimony to a systematic—nay, a desperate—search having been made for some definite object. The roller top of the rector's big desk had been pried open—evidently with a jimmy—and every scrap of paper therein had been pulled out, examined and thrown upon the floor. The contents of the side drawers had been treated in the same fashion. Most extraordinary of all, a clock—an antique article of great value as a curio—had been taken away from the room, but not stolen. It was found afterward in the ash barrel, with the works removed bodily from the case.

What should it mean? Has old St. Paul's a secret? Is some family skeleton stirring for release? Were the burglars and grave robbers looking for a birth record, a death record, a marriage record of the past, to establish some claim in the present? If the police know they will not tell; if Dr. Dix knows he will not tell; if the sexton, the janitor, the watchman, know they will not tell. But one thing is all anxious to bury the story of last Thursday night as deep as any skeleton that slumbers beneath the pavement.

The west frontage of the church property, facing Church street, and extending from Vesey to Fulton street, is occupied by a modern brick building, in the southern wing of which are the offices of the ancient and enormously wealthy Trinity Corporation, of which S. Van Brossen-Conger is the president. It is possible that the grave robbers mistook Dr. Dix's window for that of the corporation's office, where they may have expected to find whatever documents they were after, for the episode of the clock would seem to show that they were not looking for valuables.

A Hunt for Jewels.
It was suggested yesterday that the grave robbers had heard of some body that had been buried, decked out in jewels, a hundred years ago. Such things have happened in many churchyards, and especially in the resting places of the wealthy, like St. Paul's and Trinity. Their information as to the location of the tomb may not have been precise, and they may have broken into the parish house in the hope of finding some parish-aten record that would tell them.

Did it open that cabinet which they did not wish to break open? Some people will hide a key in a clock.

It is a first-class mystery that the police are asked to solve. Nothing quite like it has engaged their attention since the theft of A. T. Stewart's body from St. Mark's churchyard. And that was a simple problem compared to the mystery of St. Paul's. It was just a common piece of brigandage, while this—well, this is different.

DIED IN GLADSTONE'S PEW.

he was graduated as B. A. in 1852, as a first class in classical honors, and Senior Chancellor's Medalist, obtaining also the place of a Senior Optime in the Mathematical Tripos.

He was for some years one of the masters in Rugby school, and he held the head mastership of Wellington College from its first opening in 1858 down to 1872. For several years he was examining chaplain to the late Bishop of Lincoln, by whom he was appointed chancellor and canon residentiary of Lincoln, having been a prebendary for the same cathedral for three years previous.

He was select preacher to the University of Cambridge (1864, 1871, 1875, 1876, 1879 and 1882), and to the University of Oxford (1875-76); honorable chaplain to the Queen (1873), and chaplain in ordinary (1875-77).

Made Bishop of Truro.
In December, 1876, he was nominated by the Crown, on the recommendation of the Earl of Beaconsfield, to the newly restored Bishopric of Truro, and was consecrated in St. Paul's Cathedral April 25, 1877.

The diocese, which was taken out of the diocese of Exeter, consists of the County of Cornwall, the Isle of Scilly and five parishes of Devonshire, constituting the old Archdeaconry of Cornwall, with the church of St. Mary, Truro, as a cathedral. During his occupation of the see he began the building of a new cathedral at Truro, of which the outward shell has cost over £100,000, much of that sum having been gathered through the energy of the Bishop.

In December, 1882, Dr. Benson was appointed by the Crown to the Archbishopric of Canterbury, in succession to Dr. Tait. His Literary Efforts.
Dr. Benson had published "A Memorial Sermon," preached after the death of Dr. Lee, first Bishop of Manchester, in 1870; "Work, Friendship, Worship," being three sermons preached before the University of Cambridge in 1871; "Boy Life: Its Trial, Its Strength, Its Fulfillment," "Sundays in Wellington College," "Singleheart," "The Cathedral: Its Necessary Place in the Life and Work of the Church," "The Seven Gifts," "Christ and His Times," "Living Theology" and "Fishers of Men."

Dr. Benson was married in 1859 to Mary Stigwick, daughter of the late Rev. William Stigwick, of Skipton, Yorkshire. He was a member of the Athenaeum and Grifflous clubs, and, in addition to his archiepiscopal residence at Lambeth Palace, he had a seat at Addington Park, Croydon, Surrey.

Caught Two Burglars at Work.
Policeman Thomas J. Lyons, of the Church Street Station, heard the crashing of glass on Barclay street last evening, and captured two young men in the act of trying to enter Gates's hat store, at No. 79, through a plate-glass show window, which they had smashed in.

At the station house they said they were Alfred Howard, nineteen, of No. 149 Morris avenue, and John Carroll, eighteen, of the Providence Hotel, on Park row.

GIRL PARALYZED BY AN ELECTRIC SHOCK.

Trolley Wire Breaks and a Live End Strikes Miss Rose O'Flaherty.

LITTLE GIRL HELPS HER HOME.

Doctors Induce Pain by Placing Their Hands Near the Sufferer's Body—She Declares They Give Her Terrible Shocks.

It was a remarkably narrow escape from being electrocuted that Miss Rose O'Flaherty, a young Brooklyn woman, had while returning to her home at No. 408 Rockaway avenue, on Saturday night.

An overhead trolley wire, it is believed, snapped just as she was crossing Liberty avenue, and sent the whole current of electricity through her body into the ground. Miss O'Flaherty had been out walking.

With her was her little niece, Jennie, a girl of twelve years. They returned along Rockaway avenue toward their home. Just as they stepped across the tracks of the Nassau Electric Railroad at Liberty avenue there came a blinding flash. The younger girl screamed and ran for some distance. Then she returned and found her aunt lying unconscious on the pavement.

Miss O'Flaherty regained her senses and the girl helped her to her feet. Together they started slowly for their home. A little further on Miss O'Flaherty again became unconscious and it was several minutes before she regained her senses.

The two managed to reach the doorstep of their home, when Miss O'Flaherty sank to the ground for the third time. The little girl ran into the house and notified her sister and grandmother, and the two women came out and carried the insensible woman inside.

Dr. Louis Alderman, of No. 209 Eastern Parkway, and Samuel J. Eden, of Bushwick avenue, near Rockaway, were summoned. They succeeded in restoring the young woman to consciousness, and then it was learned that she was paralyzed from the waist down.

Whenever the doctors placed the woman's hands beside her she screamed with pain, declared that her body was full of electricity and that she received a shock as from a battery.

Miss O'Flaherty will not die, they say, but they are doubtful whether she will recover the full use of her limbs.

The young woman was employed as a clerk in the jewelry store of F. C. Steiner & Co., at No. 102 Fulton street, this city.

MRS. GOUGAR BARRED OUT.

Church Officials Did Not Want Her to Speak for Silver, but Were Outwitted.

Chicago, Oct. 11.—Helen Gougar was the cause of some stirring scenes at the People's Institute, Leavitt and Van Buren streets, this afternoon. She was admitted to speak in behalf of free silver, and in reply to certain Chicago apostles, who have been preaching the gold standard. The Institute had been secured for her for the afternoon by the Committee on Speakers of the Cook County silver organization.

However, the trustees of the West Side Christian Church, which has a Sunday lease of the Institute did not want her to speak. When the first people who were desirous of hearing Mrs. Gougar's lecture reached the Institute, shortly before 2 o'clock, they found the outer doors open but the inner door locked. The lobby was filled up and the crowd overflowed to the sidewalk.

Then came J. W. Dawson, chairman of the Institute Committee of the church, and several other officials, who told the people they could not enter.

Suddenly the people in the lobby pressed forward upon the double doors with such force that they gave way. The policemen, trustees and leaders of the crowd were carried off their feet, and the throng poured into the hall, quickly filling the seats. Before the church officials could recover from their surprise and reach the door the crowd that had been outside was inside, and the meeting was in progress.

Mrs. Gougar made an elegant speech, and was repeatedly applauded.

CAUGHT IN VANCOUVER.

G. W. Legg, Ex-Treasurer of Pike County, Ohio, and an Alleged Defaulter, Held by the Police.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 11.—The local police have arrested G. W. Legg, ex-treasurer of Waverly, Pike County, Ohio, who is said to be a defaulter for over $10,000, and for whose arrest a reward is offered by Pike County.

Legg arrived here on September 17 and registered at a hotel under the name of J. J. Manning, Cincinnati, Ohio. He was well dressed and apparently had plenty of money. After a few days he left, but returned October 2, registering under the same name. On his second visit it was noticed that he was drinking heavily, and as he appeared to be sick, a doctor was called in. The physician said he was suffering from an affection of the liver, caused by heavy drinking, and prescribed for him.

Legg then disappeared. The hotel keeper notified the police, and they located him two days later. He said he had been out to Hastings, a suburban resort near here, and when found he was without a watch, chain or money. He was verging on delirium tremens and confessed to the police his real name and crime. Information has been sent to the Ohio authorities, and meanwhile he is being held.

had more than enough to run a national campaign.

While Mr. Hanna got a great amount of money, he didn't get as much as he would if Mr. Platt's "hammer" had not been out in the style it was, "knocking" him with some of the best contributors of the past.

When these things were brought to light and the National Chairman learned what was going on, war was declared. Mr. Platt's machine needed money; $70,000 was poured into the coffers by the National Committee, and Mr. Platt's friends are quietly laughing at the National Committee, because the money contributed to the State organization has been used to injure every original McKinley man in the State. Besides working in this State Mr. Platt has been doing effective work outside the State, and the lukewarm attitude of the ex-Senator's friends, even in Ohio, has shown Mr. Hanna and those members of the Republican National Committee who have McKinley's interests at heart, that the Platt organization is a very good one, even outside of the State. The situation, according to friends of McKinley, is that the men doing the most effective work against McKinley are members of his own party who are friends of the Platt machine.

Not one penny of the money contributed by the National Committee to the State organization, it is claimed, is being spent in McKinley's behalf. It with what the Platt machine has collected and gotten through assessments, is being put out in a manner that is detrimental to the interest of McKinley. The nominees for Congress made by Mr. Platt's machine are all anti-McKinley men that are controlled by Mr. Platt, and it is well known that, if elected, these Congressmen will assist in tying McKinley's hands as much as possible.

The National Committee has been to a certain extent divided by Platt sentiment, and his friends in that body have advanced the turning over to his machine a large amount of the money collected in the State. When this has been refused, his friends have declared that Platt was not being properly treated.

Watching the Easy Boss.
Mr. Hanna's friends have, however, refused to consider Platt as a factor, except to ignore him and watch him very closely and make a note of his misdeeds for future reference.

While the ex-Senator has been playing "Breezy Babble" and keeping very quiet, he has been under surveillance as to his political associates. His lieutenants have been looked after from the financial standpoint, and today Mr. Platt's State Committee can secure any money it desires from the National Committee if the National Committee knows where the money is going and believes that it is being wisely spent. The "it" is a large one, and before it is withdrawn the State Committee will have to show what it did with the money they have already received.

This state of affairs is known to the State machine leaders, who also know how Mr. Hanna's contribution to the State Committee has been expended, and know that they have seen the last dollar they will get from that source.

Mr. Platt's last slap at the National Committee was one that stuck in the craw of the National Committee so hard that it has been carried to Canton, and when McKinley was not busy talking to delegations of Former Republicans from Ohio, Ely Republican from Missouri and Quay delegations from Pennsylvania, it has been told him.

Mr. Platt's friends captured all the Congressional districts in the city, and in the Twelfth District put off the nomination until the last minute. Among the candidates for the nomination in this district was the friend of Mr. Hanna, Wilbur Wakeman, a disciple of protection, who is thought well of by McKinley, and whose nomination was desired by the Executive Committee of the Republican National Committee, where Mr. Wakeman has charge of the distribution of campaign literature dealing with the tariff.

Mr. Platt knew that Mr. Wakeman's nomination would be an olive branch and understood that it would personally be pleasing to McKinley to know that his young friend had been nominated for Congress. The Platt leaders, Thornton, Steverson and Shums in the Congressional district held off the convention until the last day and fooled everybody as to who was going to be nominated, and led Wakeman's friends to believe that he would be the nominee. "Charley" Hess, who is declared to be a Democrat, was sprung on the convention and nominated by the "old man's" orders as a final dig at Hanna and McKinley. The reason given was that Wakeman might have been too friendly with McKinley if nominated, and the Hanna people needed disciplining.

Open War the Outcome.
This little kindness toward Mr. McKinley has, of course, not passed unnoticed at National Headquarters, and it is now an open declaration of war. McKinley's managers expect the knife and expect to give it in return. They charge that Platt's vanity is at the bottom of the whole thing; that having been placed on record as to his views in regard to McKinley, he desires in his old age to build up a reputation as a political prophet and wishes to see McKinley beaten.

They know that Mr. Platt knows that unless the Canton man is beaten, after all that has occurred, his reputation as a prognosticator is gone forever. They know that if McKinley is beaten and Platt carries the State he will be the biggest load in the piddle and Hanna will be disgraced. Were it not for the fact that Hanna believes that he can beat Platt in his own State the McKinley manager would go to any extreme to make peace with him. But the friends of McKinley in this State have assured Mr. Hanna that they will ignore Platt and carry the State for McKinley at the same time. It is on this promise that Hanna is relying rather than upon the assistance of Platt to gain the thirty-six electoral votes of New York.

As an evidence of the character of the fight now on it is charged that no known friend of McKinley is at present on the list of the State Committee as a spellbinder, and that no political club organized in McKinley's behalf previous to the nomination has been able to get any part of the money contributed to the State campaign by the National Committee. McKinley's friends in the State have all had to be taken care of by the National Committee.

What is true of Platt and his machine in the State of New York is to a certain extent true in the case of Ohio. The Ohio machine is said to be antagonistic to McKinley, and while Foraker, Kurtz and others are openly for McKinley, the latter's friends know that if he is beaten in his own State it will be by his Republican TAMMANY ROLLS UP ITS SLEEVES.

Good, Hard Work from Now On, Every Day, Until the Votes Are In.

House to House and Floor to Floor Canvass the Way It Will Be Done.

Big Mass Meeting on October 23, and Many Others at Which Good Men Will Speak.

SHEEHAN CONFIDENT OF THE RESULT.

"We Will Carry New York," He Says, "for the Workingmen Are with Us." Every Captain and Leader in Line for the Tickets.

Beginning to-day, Tammany Hall will start the real hard work of the canvass, and the election district captains will make a house to house and floor to floor campaign.

John C. Sheehan has had several conferences with the district leaders, and impressed upon them the necessity of Tammany getting out its full vote, thus giving Bryan a substantial majority in this county. According to the reports already received, Mr. Sheehan believes New York will give 40,000 Democratic majority, but he will be in a better position to make an estimate when the canvass of the captains is completed. In many of the districts yesterday the leaders were in consultation with their captains, and final instructions were given to them regarding the work that is expected of them between now and election day.

The captains have also been warned to keep their eyes open for any attempt at colouling. The Tammany Law Committee will see that all offenders are prosecuted. Tammany will hold hundreds of mass meetings between now and November 3. Arrangements are being made for a monster demonstration at the Fourteenth street wigwag on October 23, Judge Wilbur P. Porter, candidate for Governor, has promised to attend and make an address, and the other State candidates are also expected. If the weather is favorable many of the Assembly district organizations will parade to the central headquarters. A meeting of the Executive Committee will be held some day this week to receive a report from Chairman Brennan, who is in charge of the meeting. It will be necessary to hold overflow meetings in Fourteenth street. The list of speakers has not been completed.

Mr. Sheehan feels greatly encouraged over the outlook in this city and the heavy increase in the registration, particularly in the Democratic strongholds.

"Everything points to a glorious victory," said he. "Tammany has been in front and will not relax efforts until the polls are closed." "I feel no hesitancy in predicting that we will carry the city by 40,000 majority. The workingmen of New York will vote the Democratic ticket, and we expect to be successful at Washington and Albany with gold delegations."

The Bryan and Sewall Tammany Central Association, which was organized last week, will meet next Wednesday night in the rooms of the Seneca Club and discuss its plan of campaign.

WORKINGMEN FOR BRYAN.

His Name Wildly Cheered at Their Meetings—Many Unions Indorse Him and Bausch.

Committees of organized labor all over the city are to be busy this week in behalf of Bryan and Sewall. Most of these committees are delegates to the Central Labor Union, which is unofficially doing all it can to further the cause. The nomination of Jacob E. Bausch for Coroner by Tammany Hall has given a fresh impetus to the enthusiasm of labor for the Democratic State and national candidates.

A committee of prominent members and officers of labor organizations is arranging for a monster Bryan and Sewall demonstration of workmen in Madison Square Garden before the election, and is endeavoring to have Governor Altgeld of Illinois here to speak.

The following reply to an invitation from one of the committee to Governor Altgeld was received yesterday:

Henry White, Esq., New York:
Dear Sir—Your recent letter to Governor Altgeld was duly received. The answer has been delayed on account of his absence from the capital. It is not certain whether the State or National committee will permit the Governor to leave the State during the campaign. We will be able to answer more definitely in a day or two.

Thanking you for the kind interest you manifest in this behalf, I am, with assurances of high regard, yours very truly,
WILLIAM F. DOSE,
Private Secretary.

The delegates of the International Association of Bookbinders, stated yesterday that an entertainment in behalf of the striking bindery girls of Ives & Son, New York, and Brantworth, Munn & Barber, of Brooklyn, held in Tammany Hall last Friday night, the meeting went wild with enthusiasm when the name of Bryan was mentioned. Jacob E. Bausch's candidacy for Coroner was indorsed, and then a call was made for the indorsement of Bryan and Sewall.

Instantly the audience rose on its feet and cheered frantically for five minutes. Delegate Jones, of the Clothing Outlets' Union, announced yesterday to the Central Labor Union that his organization met last week and formed a Bryan and Sewall club. It also indorsed the candidacy of Jacob E. Bausch for Coroner.

Toward the close of the meeting of the Central Labor Union yesterday it was announced that the Empire City Club, an organization composed of trades unionists, had unanimously indorsed Bausch's nomination.

A Bryan and Sewall and Sulzer ratification meeting will be held by the working men of the Sixteenth Assembly District at Houston Street Square, opposite Union Market, on Wednesday night. Congressman William McNair, Mr. Sulzer and others will speak.

The Aurania Labor Club, a Knight of Labor organization, is arranging for a Bryan and Sewall ratification meeting in Hoboken Friday night.

The Wood Carvers' Union, to which Jacob E. Bausch belongs, dones a statement which was made, to the effect that it refused to indorse his candidacy.
