

UNUSUAL CAMERA GLIMPSES ALONG THE TRAIL OF NEWS.

JOHN CLAFLIN—A Rare Photograph. The New York merchant, who probably wields more influence on dry goods affairs than any other man in America, is noted for his dislike of the limelight. This is certainly the best picture of him, and perhaps the only adequate one. (Photo (C) by Paul Thompson.)

NIGHT PICTURE NEVER MADE BEFORE. For the first time a photographer climbed the South-easterly tower of the Brooklyn Bridge after dark in order to get this view looking across the East River toward Manhattan's skyscraper belt. Plainly outlined are the Bankers Trust, Singer, City Investing, Park Row and Woolworth Buildings. (Photo (C) by Brown Bros.)

FINISHED HOME OF JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR. It adjoins that of the owner's father, in West 54th Street. The interior is described as unusual because of its simplicity, but there is lacking nothing that contributes to the comfort and healthfulness of the children. For instance, special quarters are prepared for use in case any one of the youngsters has a contagious disease, and on top is a capacious roof playground surrounded by wire and glass. THOMAS F. RYAN'S NEW BRONZE DOOR. It is in the new addition to his home at 67th St. and 5th Avenue, between his library and conservatory. The door is said to be the finest example of hand-wrought bronze work. (Photo by Underwood & Underwood.)

Italy's Celebrated Kindergarden Teacher. Dr. Maria Montessori's method of training children is known the world over. American educators have vied with one another to do her honor in the course of her lecture tour. (Photo (C) by International News Service.)

Villa, The Robin Hood of Mexico. He is like the story-book bandit in that he gives money to the poor while he robs the rich. Yet report has it that wholesale executions of captured Federal officers have been due to the Constitutionalist general's barbaric standards. (Photo (C) by International News Service.)

They Call Her The Mexican Joan of Arc. "Sergeant" Marie Terrazo, who organized a small band of women to fight side by side with the rebels in the advance of Villa's Army. (Photo (C) by International News Service.)
