

General Palitzin, Arriving to Review Russian Troops, is Greeted by Blasts from New Silver Trumpets Presented to the Russians by French Regiments Serving With Them in the North of France.
(Photo © by Underwood & Underwood.)

First Photographs to Reach This Country of the Scene in the Harbor of Funchal, Madeira Islands, After the German Submarine Had Sunk the French Torpedo Boat Surprise, and the British Cable Ship Dacia and the Submarine Tender Kangaroo. Thirty-four of the Surprise Crew Perished.

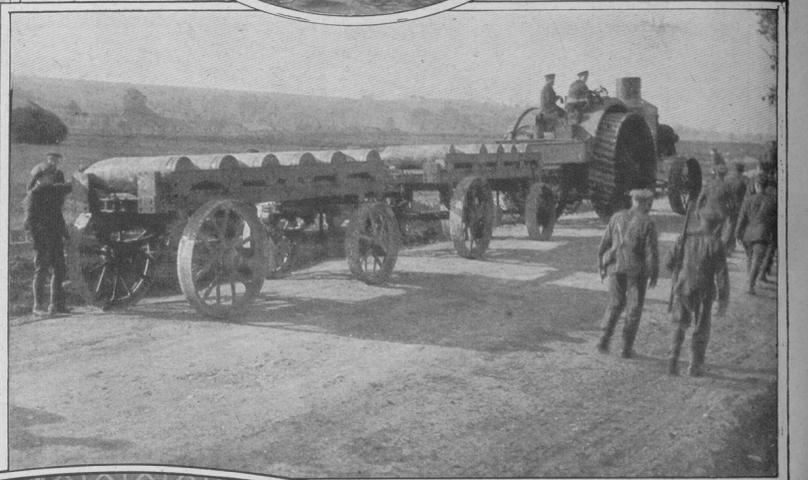

VIEW OF FUNCHAL, MADEIRA, WHICH THE GERMAN SUBMARINE SHELLED FOR TWO HOURS AFTER SINKING THE THREE ALLIED WARSHIPS IN THE HARBOR, ONE OF WHICH LIES IN THE FOREGROUND.

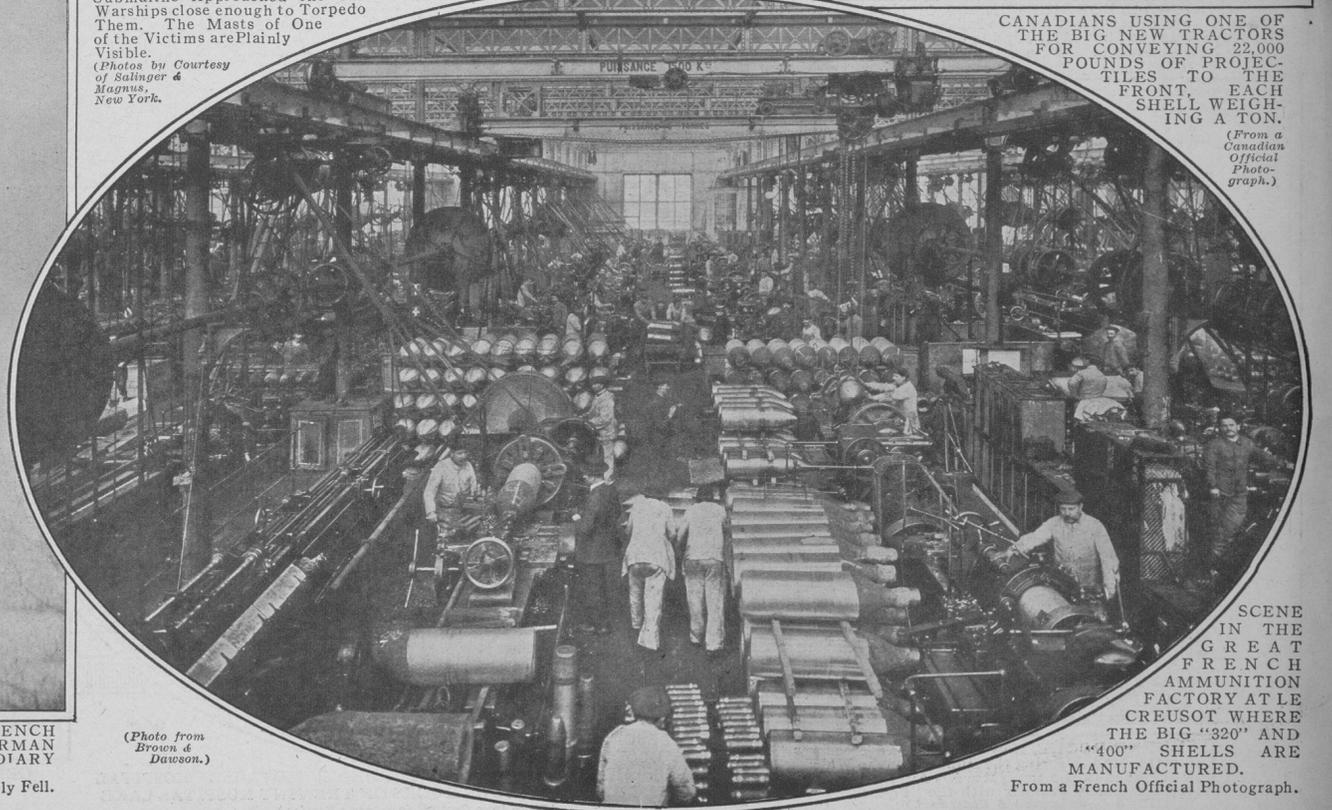

THE SIX MASTED SAILING VESSEL ELEANOR A. PERCY, LYING AT ANCHOR IN FUNCHAL HARBOR.

From Behind Her as a Screen the German Submarine Approached the Cluster of Warships close enough to Torpedo Them. The Masts of One of the Victims are Plainly Visible.
(Photos by Courtesy of Salingier & Magnus, New York.)

CANADIANS USING ONE OF THE BIG NEW TRACTORS FOR CONVEYING 22,000 POUNDS OF PROJECTILES TO THE FRONT. EACH SHELL WEIGHING A TON.
(From a Canadian Official Photograph.)

SCENE IN THE GREAT FRENCH AMMUNITION FACTORY AT LE CREUSOT WHERE THE BIG "320" AND "400" SHELLS ARE MANUFACTURED.
From a French Official Photograph.

REMARKABLE PHOTOGRAPH OF THE ESCAPE OF TWO FRENCH MILITARY OBSERVERS BY PARACHUTES WHEN A GERMAN AEROPLANE ARRIVED AND BEGAN TO SHOOT INCENDIARY SHELLS INTO THE GAS BAG, SETTING IT ON FIRE. Later Photographs Showed the Balloon Burning Furiously As It Slowly Fell.
(Photo © Underwood & Underwood.)

(Photo from Brown & Dawson.)