

A BATTERY OF "CHARS D'ASSAUT," OTHERWISE THE FRENCH RENAULT BABY TANKS, GOING FORWARD THROUGH A VILLAGE ON THE AISNE FRONT.

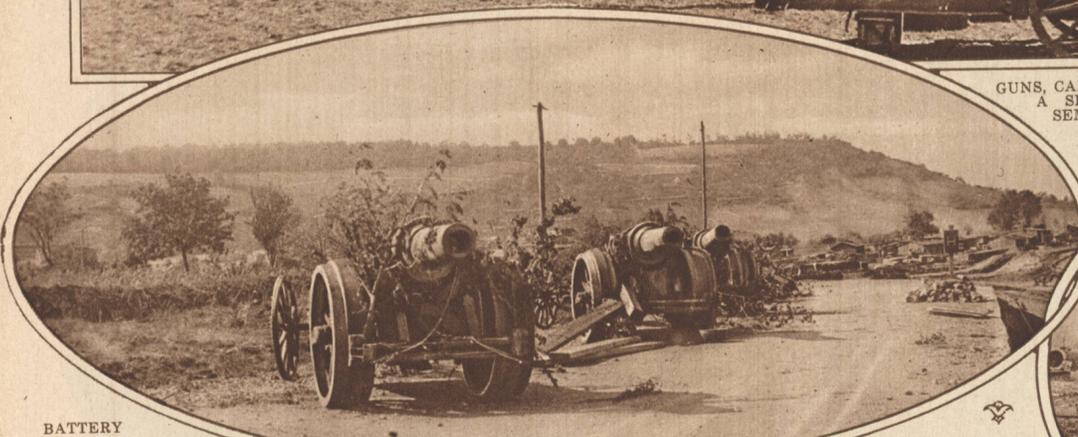

(Photos © French Pictorial Service.)

FIELD PIECES OF HEAVY CALIBRE, INCLUDING A NUMBER OF LARGE ANTI-AIRCRAFT

GUNS, CAPTURED BY THE FRENCH IN A SINGLE BATTLE AND ASSEMBLED IN A VALLEY OF THE OISE.

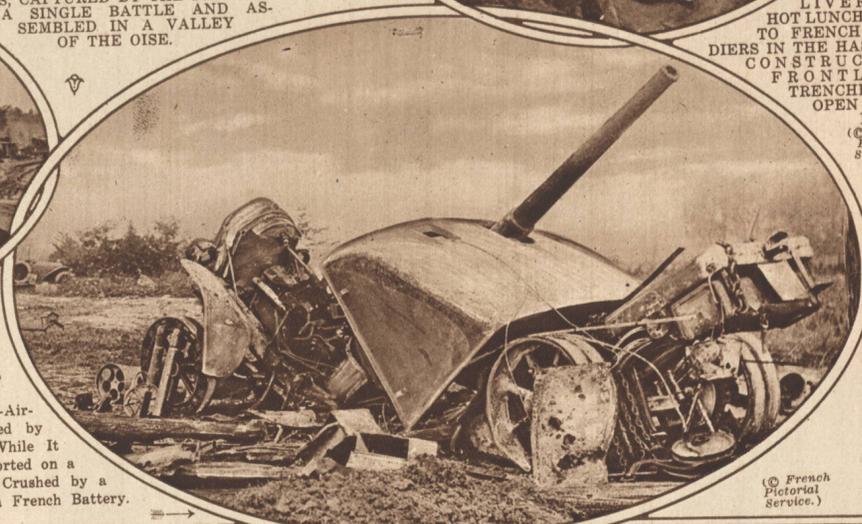

TRAINED DOGS DELIVERING HOT LUNCHEONS TO FRENCH SOLDIERS IN THE HASTILY CONSTRUCTED FRONTLINE TRENCHES OF OPEN WARFARE. (© French Pictorial Service.)

BATTERY OF HUGE FIELD PIECES,

Mounted on Iron Wheels, with Iron Bands as Tires in the Absence of Rubber, Abandoned, Intact and Still Camouflaged, by Teutons in Hasty Flight. (© French Pictorial Service.)

GERMAN NAVAL GUN,

Mounted as an Anti-Aircraft Piece, Located by Allied Observers While It Was Being Transported on a Motor Truck, and Crushed by a Single Shot from a French Battery. (© French Pictorial Service.)

GERMAN BARBED-WIRE ENTANGLEMENTS BESIDE THE VESLE RIVER THROUGH WHICH THE AMERICANS FOUGHT TO VICTORY.

GENERAL GOURAUD, COMMANDER OF THE FRENCH BEFORE RHEIMS, DECORATING THE STANDARDS OF HIS VICTORIOUS ARMY.

General Gouraud Lost His Right Arm in the Dardanelles Campaign.