The Murderers Throw Their Victims' Bodies Overboard and Run the Vessel Into Santa Cruz, Tenerife.

Though a German Vessel the Gulliana Flies the Brazilian Flag—One of the Crew Found Dead on Board.

Santa Cruz de Tenerife, Oct. 19.—The German brig Juliana, which reached this port to-day from the Mediterranean, brings a story of murder and mutiny that has scarcely its equal for horror in marine history.

Soldier of the Fifth Lancers Fighting Behind His Horse.

A detachment of this regiment yesterday fell foul of a body of Free Staters, who had come through the Tintwa Pass and looted Acton Homes.

The brig flew the Brazilian flag when she entered the harbor to-day and sought an anchorage on the east side of the basin. One of the crew managed to communicate with the Brazilian Consul, and he sought the Spanish Governor-General and asked that a force of marines from the Infanta Isabel, lying in the harbor, be sent at once to the brig.

The whole of that time—so much so that there was scarcely any movement of the audience either upstair or down. He had not even a glass of water with which to quench his lips, yet beyond a very slight hoarseness there were at no time any signs of fatigue.

Mr. Chamberlain said that in the light of recent events of the utterances of President Kruger he had come to the conclusion that war had always been inevitable. He had hoped for peace and striven to maintain it. He had always been determined to secure justice for the British in South Africa and to maintain the paramountcy of Great Britain, but with these things assured, he desired peace.

GREAT BRITAIN'S WAR POLICY. CHAMBERLAIN OUT THE 2 REPUBLICS.

He Tells the Commons His War Policy is: "Britain Must Remain the Paramount Power in South Africa"—Denies That He Forced Hostilities.

(Copyright, 1899, by the New York Journal and Advertiser.) London, Oct. 19.—One would have to go back to the days of Gladstone's Home Rule bill to find any parallel for the scene which the House of Commons presented this afternoon.

respecting his own association with Cecil Rhodes, he declared that from the time of the Jameson raid he had had no communication, either direct or indirect, with Mr. Rhodes on any subject connected with South African policy.

TOWER AND HAY TO SIGN THE MODUS VIVENDI TO-DAY.

Changes in the Terms of the Settlement of the Alaskan Dispute Are Agreed To by the British Foreign Office.

Washington Has No Official Information, but Believes the Charge d'Affaires Has Been Instructed to Sign.

Conditions of the Agreement Are Such That Either Side May Abrogate It Whenever the Occasion Arises.

London, Oct. 19.—The British Foreign Office asserts that the verbal changes in the terms of the Alaskan modus vivendi are of no practical importance and have been agreed to readily, and that it is assumed the United States Secretary of State, Colonel John Hay, and the British Charge d'Affaires in Washington, Mr. Tower, will sign tomorrow.

It is admitted to-day by officials for the first time that the modus does not materially change the situation from what it was a month or two ago. There is no obligation in the protocol that it shall endure until a final settlement shall have been reached. On the contrary, it may be abrogated by either party at any time.
