

ITALIAN COMMANDERS, ASSEMBLED IN VENICE, DISTRIBUTING DECORATIONS AMONG ARMY AND NAVAL OFFICERS AWARDED FOR GALLANTRY AGAINST THE INVADERS.

(© Underwood & Underwood.)
▼
Italian Alpini on Their Way to Trenches at Monte Tomba in Their Effort to Stem the On-Rolling Teutonic Wave.
(© Underwood & Underwood.)

BRITISH RESERVES, INCLUDING MOTOR MACHINE GUNS, CAVALRY, AND PACK HORSES, ASSEMBLED BEHIND THE BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE WHICH, A FEW WEEKS AGO, WAS GERMAN GROUND.

Paris Groups Flock to View the Souvenirs of the German Zeppelin L-49, Now Assembled in the Court of the Invalides. On the Left May Be Seen the Car in Which the Officers and Crew Live While on Board the Airship.

(© Kadel & Herbert.)

VIEW OF A SERIES OF GERMAN DUGOUTS IN A SUNKEN ROAD ON THE WEST FRONT, NOW IN BRITISH HANDS.

BELGIAN NONCOMBATANTS ONCE MORE IN FLIGHT. In Anticipation of Heavy Fighting in Their Village They Are Leaving with Whatever of Their Personal Effects Can Be Carried.

(© Underwood & Underwood.)

PRINCE HUMBERT, Heir to the Italian Throne, Landing at Spezia, Upper Mediterranean, on a Tour of Inspection of Italy's Principal Naval Base.

"THE PRAIRIE DOG CITY," AS IT IS KNOWN, AMONG THE TWO THOUSAND MEN OF THE AMERICAN AMBULANCE CORPS WHO HAVE DUG THEMSELVES IN, ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF ALLENTOWN, PENN., WHERE THEY ARE NOW IN TRAINING. They Were Recently Marched Several Miles Out of Allentown to a Sparsely Settled Section and Told to Camp There Under "Dog" Tents. Finding These Insufficient Shelter, the Men Soon Burrowed into the Hills.

(Kadel & Herbert.)