

Coroner Holds Motorists for Inquiry in Fay Case

Simon B. Eisendrath and Frederick Heyl Give Bail in Case of "Buster" Fay.

INQUIRY ON JANUARY 31

Tommy Lorenz, Who Followed Automobile to Get Number, Will Receive a Gold Medal.

THOMAS LORENZ.

Still insisting they were not responsible for the death of "Buster" Fay, Simon B. Eisendrath, the architect, and Frederick Heyl, the chauffeur, who were arrested Monday night charged with having been in the automobile which killed the boy last Friday, were arraigned before Coroner Hallenstein yesterday and held to await the result of the inquest on January 31.

Mr. Eisendrath seemed affected deeply by the situation. He appeared in the court, accompanied by his brother-in-law, Charles E. Block, of No. 538 Eighth street, Brooklyn, and his two sisters, Mrs. Block and Mrs. Lyons. His attorney, Alfred Frankenthaler, warned him not to make any statements, but the man was so overcome by emotion that he could not refrain from talking.

"It is just as I said," he declared. "We came into West End avenue, and some where near the corner of Fifty-ninth street struck something. I heard the glass of one of the lamps break, but thought no more about the matter. Nothing was further from my thoughts than that I had struck a human being, and I cannot believe it yet."

He who was accompanied by his wife and daughter, was very cool. He declined to make any statement. Coroner Hallenstein fixed bail in his case at $5,000, which was furnished by Mr. Eisendrath's sisters. He gave bail for him in $3,000. Coroner Hallenstein reducing the bail he fixed Monday night to that figure.

Assistant District Attorney Minton presented the District Attorney's office from his activity. It is evident that Mr. Whitman intends to proceed vigorously in this case. Mr. Frankenthaler said he would welcome a quick disposition of the case.

Medal for Tommy Lorenz.
"Mr. Eisendrath is concealing nothing," he said. "He has told all he knows. He feels very keenly the criticism to which he has been subjected and the insinuation that he ran away. He never had the slightest idea that he had struck anybody. As for not surrendering before the police arrested him, Mr. Eisendrath tells me that he has been very busy and didn't read in the papers that the Fay boy had been killed. I believe absolutely what he says."

Detectives Sharpe and McCormick, of the West Sixty-eighth street branch of the Detective Bureau, were congratulated yesterday on their quick work in the case. Most of the honors, however, went to little "Tommy" Lorenz, who was the only person to remain yesterday, chased the fleeing automobile almost a block and managed to see enough of the number to give the police a clue, which they followed successfully.

At a meeting of the National Highway Protective Society yesterday a gold medal was voted to the boy for his excellent work. The society was organized for the purpose of encouraging citizens to help in the detection of violators of the motor vehicle laws. The medal awarded to "Tommy" Lorenz yesterday is the fifth it has given.

George W. Callaghan, who got the number of the car which killed Elizabeth Bots, and whose evidence sent the chauffeur to Sing Sing, got the first medal. Arthur Lewis, a schoolboy, who chalked the number of a fleeing automobile on the sidewalk, got the second. The third went to Miss Mabel McCormick for saving a child from a taxicab, and the fourth was awarded to John Deans, the chauffeur who pursued the car in which Edward T. Rosenheim was riding after killing Miss Grace Hough on Pelham parkway in 1910. No date for the presentation of the medal to "Tommy" Lorenz was fixed yet, but he was a proud boy when he heard the news.

Automobilists Take Warning.
Traffic policemen reported that there was a noticeable diminution in the speed of automobiles around town yesterday. They attributed it in a large degree to the moral effect of the arrest of Mr. Eisendrath and Heyl. The rapidity with which these men were traced and placed under arrest, they said, will do more than anything else to modify the recklessness which has marked automobile driving in this city for the last few months.

The Callan law, which has come in for much criticism, because of the license it is popularly believed to give drivers of motor vehicles, does not, as the Herald pointed out yesterday, prevent the local authorities from enforcing the ordinance passed by the Board of Aldermen in 1906, limiting the speed of automobiles in the congested portions of the city to eight miles an hour and to fifteen miles an hour in the more sparsely built up sections.

It has long been a mystery to many citizens why the police suddenly stopped enforcing this ordinance. One explanation is that to enforce it would be to bring hopeless congestion of traffic in such thoroughfares as Broadway and Fifth avenue. If this is the case, it is pointed out, there is nothing to prevent the Board of Alder-

GALA PERFORMANCE AT THE OPERA SUGGESTED

Movement Started to Have Caruso Sing and Opera Specially Lighted Friday Night.

UP METROPOLITAN TOWER

Visitors View Mr. J. P. Morgan's Art Treasures and Tour City in Automobiles—See President To-Morrow.

New York held as thrills yesterday the Duke of Connaught, Governor General of Canada and his party as they made rapid tours of the city. Once they were pressed by the through which was parted finally by the police to permit them to pass and in the realms of upper Manhattan some of the expedition missed the way and became separated from the main column.

The visitors are so pleased with the metropolis, however, that it is believed that they may be persuaded to remain Friday night for a gala performance of the opera which has been proposed.

At the dinner last Monday night in the home of her host, Mr. Whitelaw Reid, Ambassador to the Court of St. James, No. 451 Madison avenue, a movement was started to make the performance of "Le Donne Curiose," next Friday night a gala occasion. Mr. Caruso is not on the bill, but an effort will be made to have him appear. Those who have been discussing this idea suggest that the Metropolitan Opera House have the lights on during the entire performance, an arrangement which would give added brilliance. It is known that the Duke has expressed a wish to be present at an opera night in New York. He will go to Washington to-morrow to call upon the President, and will be back here on Friday morning. It is his intention, so far as to be in Ottawa next Sunday to fill certain engagements. He would be able to do this if he postponed his leaving until next Saturday morning.

Princess Going to the Opera.
The possibility of the visitors being in one of the boxes at the Metropolitan next Friday night was spoken of. It is understood, at the dinner which Mr. and Mrs. Reid gave last night in honor of the Duke and Duchess and the Princess Patricia. The Princess will attend an opera matinee to-morrow with Mrs. Ogden Mills, who also will be her hostess at the evening performance.

The ducal party will be at the dinner given this evening at the home of Mrs. Mills, for which sixty invitations have been sent. Mme. Maeterlinck, wife of the Belgian poet, will sing several unpublished poems of her husband which have been set to music and will recite in French. Zimballist, the violinist, will play.

Kaleidoscopic glimpses of the metropolis of the Western World came to the ducal party yesterday. The Duke and Duchess, accompanied by his aide, Captain Rives-Bulkeley, went out at nine o'clock in the morning for a constitutional. He walked down Madison avenue to Forty-sixth street, crossed over to Fifth avenue and stopped a moment to look in at the display window of a firm of picture dealers. After going almost as far as the entrance to Central Park he returned to Madison avenue. He and the Captain spent fully a quarter of an hour watching the housewives erecting the steel work of the addition to the Ritz-Cariton.

The entire ducal party went at half-past ten o'clock to the tower of the building of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company from which hundreds of feet above the level of Madison square, they saw the city and its environs. The Duke was impressed especially by the width of the streets and he studied the gaunt skyscrapers with deep interest. Here and there he could pick out some landmark of the city that was when he was here more than forty years ago. He was amazed at the evidence of growth and development he saw on every hand.

View City from Telescopes.
John R. Hegeman, president of the company, showed the visitors the boundaries of the metropolis, and their vision was assisted by powerful telescopes which had been placed on the upper platform. The day was bright and clear enough to afford an excellent view. None of the public had been admitted to the tower, but when the guests descended they found five hundred persons gathered on the pavement.

The citizens pressed so close that Police Lieutenant William A. Funston and Inspector Parkinson, of the Canadian Secret Service, had to widen their lanes through which the visitors made their way to the waiting automobiles. The party then went to the library of Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, in East Thirty-sixth street, where they were received by Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., who showed the artistic and literary treasures of the place in the absence of his father, who is now abroad. Mr. Herbert L. Satterlee, a son-in-law of Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, and several friends were in the library. The party then returned to the home of Mr. Reid for luncheon. Among those who had been invited to meet them was Colonel Theodore Roosevelt.

Cards were left by numerous callers in the early afternoon. The automobiles were brought into requisition at half-past three o'clock, when the visitors were conveyed up Fifth avenue. The automobiles slowed down at Fifty-ninth street and a shabbily dressed man, who muttered something which nobody could understand, leaped on the running board of the car in which the Princess and Lieutenant Colonel Lowther were seated. He quickly was induced to get down and the car was hurried into Central Park.

Visit Grant's Tomb.
The party followed the East Drive, looked at the houses of Millionaires' Row, and especially at the home of Andrew Carnegie, and then at 110th street turned westward. The destination was Columbia University, but when that point was reached the automobile in which were the Duke and Duchess and Mr. Reid could not be seen. The party, seeing nobody to greet them on the steps of the library as they had expected, went to the tomb of General Grant, in Riverside Drive. Lieutenant Funston tried to find Mr. Reid by telephone.

After paying their respects at the resting place of the American General, the party went back to Columbia, where they found Mr. Reid and the Duchess awaiting them. In the trustees' room the Duke, uncle of George V., read the charter which George II. of England had given to King's College, now Columbia University, in the eighteenth century.

The visitors heard evensong in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, on Morningside Heights. The Duke was interested greatly in the architecture of the edifice, and walked through the chapels. He was escorted by Canon Jones and by the venerable verger, Charles E. Barnard. The ducal party then returned to the home of Mr. Reid.

SIMPLE CEREMONY FOR VISIT TO MR. TAFT
Duke Will Remain at White House Fifteen Minutes and Then Go to British Embassy for Dinner.

HERALD BUREAU, WASHINGTON, D. C., Tuesday, Jan. 23.
Simple ceremonies will mark the reception of the Duke of Connaught by President Taft when the Governor General of Canada, comes to Washington on Thursday. This was announced officially at the White House to-day. The suggestion that the Duke would call incognito was dismissed when the White House let it be known that no such visitors ever were received by a President. Before an appointment can be arranged for even a titled foreigner to meet the President the understanding must exist that the caller will appear under his own name.

The Duke will be met in Washington by Ambassador Bryce, and if he has time he will be taken at once to the British Embassy. From there he will go to the White House, escorted by a troop of cavalry from Fort Myer, Va. The same escort will accompany him again to the embassy. Ambassador Bryce will present the Duke to the President in the Red Room. None of the members of the Cabinet will be present, with the possible exception of the Secretary of State, according to the tentative plans made this afternoon. The Cabinet to-day considered the arrangements for the Duke's reception, but gave up the task. This was later passed along to Assistant Secretary of State Chandler and Major Archibald Butt, the President's military aide. They were in conference with the British Embassy this afternoon, but were unable to announce the details on account of the doubt as to the hour of the arrival of the Duke.

Social interest last night centered chiefly in the dinner, musicale and ball given by Mr. and Mrs. Reid at their home for the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia. Fifty-two guests attended the dinner. For the dance and musicale which followed 350 additional were asked.

The dinner was served in the remodelled dining room of the house. This room is sixty feet deep and proportionately wide and is decorated in the style of the period of Louis Quinze. The dinner was served at small tables in the centre of each of which was a cluster of pink roses.

As one enters the house at the right is the ballroom and at the left are the corridors that lead to the dining room. At the left also is the original ballroom, which, last night, was used as a reception room. The ballroom was originally a series of salons extending across the full western end, facing Madison avenue. When the house was remodelled these salons were thrown into one forming a room sixty feet long and about forty wide. Even with three hundred in the house for the entertainment the dancers were not crowded. The musicians were hidden behind a screen of palms and vines at one end of the room.

During the hour before the dancing Mme. Johanna Gadecki and Mr. Smirnoff, of the Metropolitan Opera, gave a programme of solos and duets. Mme. Gadecki sang several opera arias and Mr. Smirnoff some songs in Russian. Mr. Arthur Rosenstein played the accompaniment.

The dinner guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Henry White, Senator Elihu Root, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Choate, Mr. and Mrs. George B. McClellan, Mr. and Mrs. F. Gay Griswold, Mr. and Mrs. Peter G. Gerry, Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills Reid, General Horace Porter, Mr. and Mrs. Francis C. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, Miss Harriet Alexander, Miss Marion Hollins, Mr. W. Butler Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. Royal Phelps Carroll.

Mr. Lambert's Petition Received in Washington.
WASHINGTON, Tuesday.—The petition of George Lambert, a justice of the peace of Pelham, N. Y., for the dissolution of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company on the ground that it is a monopoly in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, was received by the Department of Justice to-day.

The department, it is known, has been investigating the corporation for several weeks to ascertain its relation to the Sherman law. The investigation has not been completed. The petition was referred to Mr. Fowler, assistant to the Attorney General.

DENIES TELEPHONE CONCERN IS A TRUST

Mr. Vail, President of Company, Says Sherman Law Has Not Been Violated.

MR. DUSHKIND'S VERSION

Lawyer Declares Independents Have Been Ruined by Alleged Unlawful Methods.

The exclusive announcement in the HERALD that a petition had been forwarded to Attorney General George W. Wickersham in Washington, asking that the American Telephone and Telegraph Corporation, of No. 15 Day street, be dissolved on the ground that the $700,000,000 corporation was a trust within the meaning of the Sherman Anti-Trust law, caused a commotion in financial circles yesterday.

Although the filing of a petition for the dissolution of an alleged trust warrants no prediction that the Department of Justice will take the action prayed for, it was said in Wall street that it had been an open secret for several weeks that Mr. Wickersham had been quietly investigating complaints of independent telephone companies in all parts of the country with a view of beginning proceedings against the corporation should the facts warrants that course. The petition was filed by George Lambert, a justice of the peace, of Pelham.

One of the immediate effects of the petition was a sagging of the stock of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. The stock opened at $149 1/2, fell to $146, then rallied to $146 1/2. The stock then advanced one-quarter, then went to $146 1/2, and dropped to 146 1/4. The total sales amounted to 6,600 shares.

Theodore N. Vail, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, who was asked for a view with respect to the charge that the corporation was a trust, said:

"I have not as yet read the petition which I understand has been filed in Washington. The petition is simply that of an individual against a corporation and has no significance until the Attorney General takes action. As regards the American Telephone and Telegraph Company being a monopoly in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust law, I can only say that any act of this company in the matter of acquiring other concerns has been done either after a direct appeal by that company or with the acquiescence of that concern. Every act has been passed upon favorably by the authorities in the States interested."

Charles Dushkind, of No. 5 Beekman street, the attorney who drew up the petition at the instance of Mr. Lambert, refused to agree with the part of Mr. Vail's statement regarding the acquiring of other telephone companies. He declared that the Department of Justice was in possession of ample evidence to show that the company had acquired numerous independent telephone companies only when they had been driven to the wall and were powerless to do business against its powerful rival.

"In September last," said Mr. Dushkind, "the corporation had a fight on its hands with a local independent telephone company in St. Louis. Finding that the independent concern refused to be browbeaten, the Bell Telephone Company of Missouri, which is backed by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, installed absolutely free telephone service in every drug store, cafe, night store and other places visited by the general public. Was that an arbitrary use of power or were the free telephones installed from motives of philanthropy? Perhaps Mr. Vail has no personal knowledge of the fight against the independent telephone company in St. Louis. If he had, he probably would not have made the statement attributed to him."
