Hey, Delegate! Listen to This!

Many Whose Terms of Foreign Service Had Expired Are Willing to Stay Abroad.

Fort Leavenworth, Kan., Saturday.—The Philippine brand of foreign service is not so bad. You can get 388 enlisted men and a complement of officers of the Seventh Infantry to testify to it. That much of the Seventh has returned to Fort Leavenworth. The rest of the regiment liked the service abroad well enough to get itself transferred for the Chinese excursion of the Fifteenth or to remain in the islands. Then there were some, of course, whose terms of service had expired and who decided to come home for a while before re-enlisting. But most of them stuck to their rifles, and those who didn't care to go to China came back with the famous old Seventh.

They met a reception that was both warm and cool, according to the Kansas City Star. There were their mates at the post, who gave a "grand reception and ball" for the enlisted men in the post armistarium. Also, there will be receptions and dances and dinners for the officers and their wives, and then a general levee of absence to visit relatives and friends in all parts of the country.

The weather furnished the contrast. Officers superintending the unloading of luggage added heavy woollen sweaters under their uniform coats to the very ample provision of Uncle Sam against cold—and then they shivered in the unaccustomed chill and retained the sweaters even in the club house.

Physically fit. But they all looked physically fit. There was a ruddy tan hardly acquired in this country that testified to tropical service and a slight puckering at the corners of the eyes from looking across stretches of brightly colored landscape under the blaze of a tropical sun.

Two battalions were stationed at Fort McKinley, just a comfortable trolley ride from Manila, and the other was at Camp Eldredge, on Laguna de Bay, also in easy reach of the capital. It was regular post service, the officers say. Fort McKinley is a large post. It covers more ground than Fort Leavenworth. Its garrison includes the Seventh and the Twelfth Infantry, the Seventh Cavalry, two batteries of artillery and a company of engineers.

From the nearest edge of the United States, life looked almost comfortably, very much as it did at home, there were two miles of Filipinos, except at Manila. There was no combat, except in the track meets and football games between companies. Away down in the southern islands—Mindanao and Jolo, from which one may look over at home—there were skirmishing and rumors of small insurrections, but another department was looking after that, and only the practice "likes" broke the routine of post life.

Snipe and Duck Shooting. The health of the men was excellent, better than at home, if anything. The quartermaster estimated the sick list at two per cent or less for the two years and a half. The days were warm, some of them hot, but on two outside blankets at night, if one was outside the walled city of Manila was the rule. The dry, pleasant season began about Thanksgiving and lasted until the rains, which started in June. Then there was much moisture—and some of the finest snipe and duck shooting to be found anywhere in the world. Also there was deer shooting, far more satisfactory than the Philippine chasing of other years.

As to social life, there was a wide variety of things in Manila, particularly among the foreign quarters, is a very lively city, nearly as large as Kansas City, too. Then there is the weekly dance at the post, with visitors out from the city, and reciprocal events in Manila, so that one might never lack for social diversion.

The men had a good time, too. Manila was handy, and (as has been remarked) Manila was lively, and lending itself to all kinds of gaiety, even to motion picture theatres, dance halls and amusement parks.

Call to China. Enlisted men were drawing twenty per cent additional pay for foreign service and getting double time credited on their enlistment, to say nothing of the covered little bars of color worn proudly over the left breast and recording the terms of foreign service.

The Seventh is one of the most famous of regiments, and it is a proper pride in their command evidenced by officers and enlisted men alike. It is something to have served with the Seventh, with its Mexican War history and the celebrated names of its officers and men. Its more recent Alaskan service and its repeated adventures in the Philippines.

But the lure of the Orient—and, maybe, the added pay and the double time credited—subtracted from a dozen to fifteen men from each company of the Seventh, taking advantage of the privilege of transferring for more island service or to enlist for the Chinese excursion of the Fifteenth, recruiting up to foreign service strength to take a hand, if necessary, in affairs where the dawn comes up like thunder, and the night falls like oil.

If What is Promised Here Does Not Make You Sharpen Up Your Appetite You Are Hopeless.

The planted shad season will be fading into twilight when the delegates to the Democratic National Convention come to Baltimore in June, says the Baltimore Evening Sun, and so it will be impossible to feed them upon Maryland's loveliest and most celebrated dish, but a multitude of other superb victuals, all peculiar to these best latitudes, will be on the current bill. For example, Chesapeake soft crabs, fried an' natural and with Charles county bacon. For example, Ann 'Ran'el sugar corn, as sweet as honey and as tender as pumkin. For example, strawberries in cream, fresh from the vine and the cow. For example, Maryland pullet, cooked in the Maryland style. For example, red, ripe tomatoes, as large as baseballs, skinned, scalded and oiled and stuffed with mayonnaise. For example, our sixty-five species of summer fish, no two alike. For example, cherry pie.

Upon such delightful things the delegates and alternates, the reporters and muckrakers, the assessors and camp followers, will feast day after day. Let Mr. Crain take time by the forelock and appoint a learned and ardent committee on victuals that no base sophistications may hurt the good name of the town. If any eating house keeper, his soul dead within him, ventures to serve soft crabs in the New York style, covered with cracker dust and fried in lard, let the committee land upon him, arrest him, jug him. Folk come to Baltimore to eat Maryland victuals, not to eat New York pseudo victuals. The visitor who is served properly, who gets the authentic native dishes, will go away an incurable booster for Baltimore. But if our caterers deceive and defraud him, taking advantage of his politeness and his high state of stimulation, then he will revile Baltimore for the rest of his days and our grand preparations will all go for naught.

Princeton Wins Its Final Hockey Game

HOBBY BAKER THE SENSATION OF THE EVENING FOR HIS FAST WORK. CAPTAIN A. G. KAY, PRINCETON HOCKEY TEAM. KUHN, CENTRE, PRINCETON HOCKEY TEAM.

Tigers Down Yale in Thrilling Contest and Win Intercollegiate Championship.

Princeton beat Yale last night at the St. Nicholas Rink in a thrilling hockey match by a score of 4 to 1, and with the victory won the championship of the intercollegiate league. As in every game that the Old Nassau seven has played this year, "Hobby" Baker was practically the whole show.

Neither side was able to tally in the first period, although each had many chances. Carhart, the Yale goal guardian, and Kahlbeisch, at the opposite end, were on their mettle, and they shunted away everything that was aimed at them.

Notch Up Speed.

Both teams played to the limit of their speed in the second half. Harmon got the rubber up near his own cage after five minutes of play, carried it along the sideboards in a lightning rush and slammed it like a bullet at the Tiger goal. The disk bounced out, but Cox was right on the job and swept it in for the first tally.

Kay Ships in Slow One.

Kay scored the third goal in 12m. 49s. from a scrimmage. He picked it up from a tangle of legs near the Yale net, and allped a slow one past Carhart at an angle almost parallel to the cage.

Sensational as was Baker's first goal, the last one of the game, which he also tallied, was every bit as good. Once more he got the rubber up in his own territory and tore through the Yale defence all alone. Just as he was about to make the final stroke for the net he tripped and went down. As he hit the ice he took a long sweep with his stick, and pushed the Verona Club's Representative Carries Off Honors of Meet with Three Victories. Washington Fencers' Club Team Defeat Naval Academy, 6 to 3, but Midshipmen Win with Sabres.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Saturday.—The terms of the Washington Fencers' Club, composed entirely of army officers, won a decisive victory with the foils over the Naval Academy swordsmen this afternoon and barely lost with sabres. The meet, which was won by the visitors by six bouts to three, while the midshipmen won five of the sabre bouts to their opponents' four.

Sholberg, a star of West Point teams in recent years, won all his bouts with the foils, while Breckenridge, a famous wielder of the blade a little further back, pulled two of his three bouts. Lieutenant Pullen, of West Point's Naval Academy, defeated the Naval Academy sabre fencer, and took two bouts. Although they lost the opening match of the season the midshipmen were opposed by unusually skillful and experienced opponents and their work indicated that the team of this year would be a strong one.

CHESS NEWS AND GOSSIP.

Arrangements have been made by the Committee of the New York State Chess Association to hold the next championship meeting of this organization at the rooms of the Manhattan Chess Club, in Carnegie Hall Building, on Washington's Birthday, play beginning at ten o'clock in the morning and lasting until midnight.

Although Johnner, Jaffe and Chajes, three of the American representatives at the Carlsbad Chess Tournament, had entered for the International Gambit Tournament now in progress at Abbazia, the Austrian health resort, the competition got under way without them, inasmuch as the entries had to be limited to ten. Those finally selected were: Dr. Peris, Duras, Spielmann, E. Cohn, von Freymann, Leonhardt, Siskely, Flamberg and Nieholm. In addition to the brilliancy prize offered by Baron Louis de Rothschild, special prizes of 100 crowns each have been offered by General Consul Halbersten, of Hamburg, for brilliancy, and L. Collip, of Norway, for the best Bishop's Gambit.

In the annual championship tournament of the Brooklyn Chess Club, G. J. Scheitler leads with a score of 4 to 1, the missing point representing two draws in the first two games. The Metropolitan championships will be held at the Brighton Beach Roller Rink, starting the second week in July.

SCHOLBOY SKATING RACES

Arthur Gershal, with a start of ten yards on Twombly, just managed to beat the latter in the junior schoolboy quarter mile race yesterday at the St. Nicholas Rink in the last time of 48s. There were more than twenty starters, some with handicaps up to fifty yards. The two back line boys, however, picked up the leaders one after another until the last lap was reached, when together they went after the prize. Gershal, being the stronger of the two, barely managed to win.

ROLLER SKATING DATES.

The Metropolitan championships will be held at the Brighton Beach Roller Rink, starting the second week in July.

NEW YORK BREAKS MANHATTAN EVES EVEN AT RACQUETS

One Team Wins from Philadelphia and Another Loses to Boston in National Championship Tourney.

Nos. 62 and 64 Defeat No. 84, of Brooklyn, in Senior and Junior P.S.A.L. Basketball Games.

[SPECIAL DESPATCH TO THE HERALD.] PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Saturday.—Sensational play marked the semi-final round of the national racquet championship in doubles at the Racquet Club, here to-day.

Quincy A. Shaw and George R. Peering, of Boston, the title holders, smothered J. Gordon Douglas and Lawrence Waterbury, of New York, 4 games to 1, while Payne Whitney and Milton S. Barger, the other team representing the Racquet and Tennis Club of New York, defeated R. K. Cassatt and Wilson Potter, of Philadelphia, 4 games to 2. George E. Brooke acted as referee of both games and F. C. Tompkins as marker. The decisive match between to-day's survivors will be played to-morrow.

The better match was that won by Messrs. Whitney and Barger. The contest went the full distance of seven games, and it was only the resourcefulness of the New York experts which saved them from defeat. In fact, it seemed almost certain they would lose after having lost the first two games. They failed to score even a single point in the opening game, something that even the most anguished friends of their opponents had never expected of them.

But in the third game Messrs. Whitney and Barger warmed up to their work, although Messrs. Cassatt and Potter, with a collection of puzzling services, counted nine in the second game. Messrs. Whitney and Barger in their half added three to their opening effort of two. Mr. Barger's service became more effective as the game progressed, while Mr. Whitney counted four in the second game. He won the game in the fifth hand on service.

New York Men Tie Score. The way the New York experts cleaned up their opponents in the fourth game, tying the score, made it appear as if the end was near. Messrs. Cassatt and Potter gathered in four points, but that was all they got. After an ace in the first hand Messrs. Whitney and Barger displayed a brand of racquets that would be hard to duplicate. Mr. Whitney went in to serve, and before he was handed out to serve, a point had been counted. Mr. Barger kept up the good work, winning the next two points on a serve and a place.

Again the tide turned, Messrs. Cassatt and Potter running out the fifth game in four hands. Here Mr. Cassatt placed beautifully. Messrs. Barger and Whitney had to be content with three aces. Both of the New York players were "on" again in the next game, where the result was reversed. Mr. Whitney's service became as puzzling as Mr. Potter's had been earlier in the day, while Mr. Barger handled many hard shots in his best style.
